HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The changing face of agriculture involves complex issues that can confuse even the most knowlegeable ag representative.

In an effort to make sense of it all, a basic overview of the transitions and challenges facing the ag industry was addressed during the 10th annual Ag Horizons Conference at the Wildwood Conference Center, Tuesday.

The conference is designed to help ag educators understand the transitions taking place and how to address these in the classroom.

Many industry representatives praised FFA instructors for giving them a solid agricultural background that enabled them to become successful in ag industries and in farming.

To continue to educate today's youth, it is imperative that teachers grasp a working knowledge of changes and how they affect the industry and cooperatives.

Dr. George Conneman of Cornell University challenged participants to be "proactive" by initiating, evaluating, and integrating changes rather than "reactive" by resisting and challenging changing trends.

Across the U.S., demographics are showing a trend toward cultural diversity, an aging population, two-worker families, and fewer young people. Trends include a shift away from red meats, animal fats, and cholesterol, and an increased need for fresh produce and fiber in diets.

Consumer concerns for a safe food supply comes at the same time as environmental concerns increase.

"I predict that EPA will become more important than USDA and will govern more," Conneman said.

Biotechnology, genetic engineering, and global trade spin a web of opportunity. Record keeping and information increase. "But

President Declares Several Counties Federal Disaster Areas

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — County, state and federal agriculture officials have been busy this week working to determine and document drought-caused farm losses to forward to the USDA to establish disaster assistance eligibility.

At the same time, Cooperative Extension specialists have been calling for emergency drought meetings to provide farmers with information and to answer questions.

A special Cooperative Extension satellite downlink program to provide drought information and answer specific questions from participants is scheduled to be held at regional downlink sites across the state, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., August 10. Check with a local Cooperative Extension office for local details.

Also, Penn State University Cooperative Extension this week has set up a "Hay Net" information exchange program for those who need hay, and those who have hay to sell.

According to a state Department of Agriculture drought fact sheet, the Haynet is "a computer-based service providing the names, addresses and telephone numbers of hay dealers across Pennsylvania. Maintained and operated by Penn State University College of Agricultural Sciences, the service is free for buyers and sellers.

"Anyone with a computer and modem can access the service at www.cas.psu.edu/docs/cashome/drought/haynet.html or by calling (814) 863-2713."

Local, national and international news media have turned their attention to drought problems in the Mid-Atlantic states where the drought has hit hard, with no relief in sight.

Late July estimates of recovery of groundwater for southcentral Pennsylvania, indicated that recovery will take much time and much more rain than historically has fallen through the end of the year.

On Monday, August 2, President Clinton declared West Virginia and four contiguous counties in southwestern Pennsylvania, a fed-

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. — For three days next week the Rodman Lott and Son Farm, near hear, will host the annual Empire Farm Days.

The event allows farmers an opportunity to see the latest ag techniques and technologies at one time and in one place.

At the ag showcase event, scheduled Aug. 10-12, more than 600 exhibitors, featuring more than 3,000 brand names, will have their wares on display. Not only will visitors be able to see demonstrations of the technology available, but the site is host to a series of dairy profit seminars focused on the latest in management and profitability strategies.

With more than 100 acres of agricultural displays, Empire Farm Days will feature a variety of demonstrations, including improved and expanded timber, construction, and livestock displays, livestock handling demonstrations, an antique tractor parade, a ride and drive area, and other big events.

Farm health and safety associations meet at the event to provide farmers free health screenings and life-saving demonstrations. Farm family programs offer daily activities designed to help farm families meet today's farm lifestyle challenges, according to event organizers.

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE

In Chicago and the Eastern Region, prices were unchanged to sharply lower on all sizes. Elsewhere, prices were unchanged. The market tone ranged barely steady to weak, mostly weak. Retail demand was generally slow to fair with limited feature activity noted throughout the country. Supplies of jumbo eggs remained close, however, the balance of sizes were at least adequate to ample with the large and smaller eggs in the longest positions. Breaking stock supplies were fully sufficient from regular sources, and most trading continued to center around the attractively priced lighter weight product. Light type hens were fully adequate to ample for immediate slaughter requirements.

In the dairy business, income over feed cost is the name of the game Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements offer dairymen the means to maximize this value while getting the most from their cow's natural abilities.

Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements are concentrated sources of just what ordinary feeds lack protein, energy, vitamins, minerals -- everything animals need for economical milk production and growth

For replacement heifers, Pro-Lix means faster maturity and assurance that they'll get to the milking herd on time. If you trust your heifers to forage alone, they might not make it (Bouvatec Is Available)

For lactating cows, the nitrogen content of Pro-Lix means plenty of protein available for milk production and growth.

Finally, for dry cows, Pro-Lix not only helps maintain their health during the dry period it prepares them for the next lactation. The Ca:P ratio in Pro-Lix helps control milk fever, while the Vitamin E and selenium aids in clean-up after the birth of a calf.

Best of all, Pro-Lix works with all types of pasture grass or forage, as a free-choice supplement, a top-dressing, or a ration mix

The payoff is healthier animals and economical production, all year round!

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO
Wed Aug 04, 1999
USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Grain and soybean bids were higher at the close with soybeans sub- stantially higher. Wheat 1 to 4 cents higher. Corn 3 to 11 cents higher. Sorghum 9 cents higher. Soybeans 10 to 18 cents higher. Wheat bids were supported by news that spring wheat yields have been 1 to 2 bushels under last year. Strong corn and soybean trade was also a factor in higher wheat bids. Continue lack of export sales this week, limited gains. Crop damage to corn and soybean crops after the recent hot, dry weather is being seen and reduced yields are expected. Some commercial buying on the Board and good overnight export sales to Taiwan was supportive to soybean bids. Some rainfall is forecast for the Midwest with continued cooler temperatures expected. Indications that China offered South Korea credits to buy over 1 million metric tons of corn gave bids a boost.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

AUGUST 9-15, 1999

NEW MOON, AUGUST 11.

LOOK TO THE SKIES!

August 11 marks a total eclipse of the Sun, just as the Dog Days of summer come to an end. Only the partial phase will be visible from North America, and this only from the northeastern parts of the United States and eastern Canada, where the Sun will rise partially eclipsed. It's an early-morning event — over between 6:15 and 6:45 A.M., Eastern Daylight Time, depending on your exact viewing location August 11 to 13 is also the best time for viewing the Perseid meteor showers, with their approximate peak rate of 75 per hour They originate in the northeastern sky and are best seen around 5 00 A M.

Lovely flowers fade fast. Weeds last the season. – Swedish proverb

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Don't give up on your weeding or watering yet!

EASY CRANBERRY CHICKEN

1/2 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
6 boneless chicken breasts
1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter
1 can (15 ounces) whole-berry cranberries
1/2 cup water
dash ground nutmeg

In a shallow dish, combine flour, salt, and pepper; dredge chicken Melt butter in a large skillet and brown chicken Remove chicken and set aside. Add remaining ingredients to skillet, stir, and bring to boil. Reduce heat, return chicken to skillet, cover, and simmer about 20 minutes, until chicken is tender. Baste with the sauce and serve.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Five or six fogs in a row, and you'll have rain.

When the months of July, August, and September are unusually hot, January will be the coldest month.

If corn blades twist up, it will rain.

OPINION

The Drought Is No One's Fault

"Rationality" is a term for a state of mind open to reasonable and logical thinking and behaving.

In good times, not everyone has it.

In bad times, it can become as elusive as the perfect cow.

This drought is a statistical once-in-a lifetime experience that would have been nice to miss, but it is no time to lose mental calmness and rationality.

The drought is the drought. It's not anything else. It's not a precursor to Armageddon. It's a drought.

The American agricultural community is used to disaster and at times calamity, but we're not immune to becoming so stressed as to lose our rationality.

The mind can race with all the unanswered "What ifs?" and lock up like a cattle trailer with bad brakes.

There is help for those facing a loss of crops and a loss of cash flow. That information is in the news stories we publish and available at local Cooperative Extension offices.

But there is also help for those for whom this drought is the last straw to continuing farming as they have.

A North Dakota State University Extension article authored by Deb Gebeke, a family science specialist, and Kim Bushaw, a Parent Line Program specialist, is published in this issue.

The article is about how to talk to children about tough times. Here is an excerpt:

"Take time to reflect on your situation — you are not in control of things such as weather and downsizing of a business.

"Once you have resolved yourself of the need for change, begin to think about the real message you want to send your children. Some of the points to consider:

• "It's not the children's fault. Remind them that they are not responsible for what's happening.

• "The family will need to make some changes, and you will appreciate their cooperation.

• "Many decisions will need to be made. Children will be involved in discussion but must remember that the adults will need to make difficult choices that are in the interest of the entire family. Not everyone will appreciate every decision.

• "Your children's ideas are welcome and respected. Appreciate their helping out, and do not ridicule their ideas, regardless of what they are. Point out the helpful parts and explain why other parts are not workable. Listen.

• "No matter what happens, there is no problem so great that together you and your family cannot work through it. To get through this, the family must be open to seeking out whatever help is available.

• "This is a temporary situation. Keep the 'big picture' in mind, and work toward the end goals set by the family. Keep the children informed about progress and what to expect. Pull together and make it through.

• "The most important thing you can do for each other is simply to listen and then help the others turn their thoughts in a positive direction."

Now Is The Time

To Watch Drought Satellite Program

On Tuesday evening, August 10 Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences will be holding a satellite conference on drought. The program will be from 7 P.M. to 9 P.M. with a 30 minute question and answer session from 9 P.M. to 9:30 P.M. Faculty members from agronomy, veterinary science and forest resources will address issues facing farmers during this dry period. Also, family stress issues that result from decreased income, crop insurance and feeding questions will be discussed. Those people with satellite dishes may view the program on Satellite: SBS 6 transponder 2, KU band. Many Pennsylvania county cooperative extension offices will be down linking the conference. For more information on this meeting contact your county cooperative extension office. Lancaster County will be down linking the program in our downstairs meeting room at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Drive, Lancaster PA.

To Attend Drought Meeting

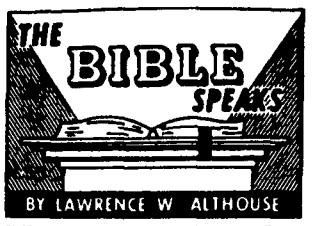
Our office will be holding drought meetings on Wednesday, August 11. Greg Roth, Penn State Agronomist, Jud Heinrichs, Penn State Dairy Scientist, Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent and Timothy Fritz, Lancaster and Chhester Counties Extension Far Management Agent will be discussing the current drought situation in the county. They will be discussing crop damages, harvesting options, alternative crops, purchasing feeds, feeding concerns and herd health.

The first meeting will be held 1 P.M. at the Paradise Community Hall in Paradise Park on the north side of Route 30 near the bridge construction. The second meeting will be held 7 P.M. at Summit Valley School on Eastern School Road, south of New Holland, just east of New Holland Road. Plan to attend one of these meetings so you may learn more about your options, concerns that need to be addressed and precautions that must be taken to prevent major problems.

To Manage Alfalfa for Leafhoppers

During dry weather the management of alfalfa is critical. Potato leafhoppers can cause severe damage to alfalfa during dry growing seasons, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent. They damage alfalfa in several ways: losses in hay tonnage, delayed re-growth, reduced livability and survivability of the stand. Hopper resistant alfalfa varieties are also impacted by dry weather if not sprayed with an insecticide. When alfalfa fields seem like they are not growing due to dry weather, continued monitoring and spraying to control leafhoppers is essential. Once fields show damage, growth has stopped. To rescue the field and to initiate new growth, the field needs to be harvested or clipped. In addition to cutting the field, it should be sprayed to protect it from re-infestations. To scout a field, use an insect net and make 20 sweeps. If you catch 4 or more leafhoppers and the alfalfa is less than 4 inches tall, then spray. If the alfalfa is between 4 and 8 inches tall and you catch 6 or more leafhoppers you should spray. If the alfalfa is over 8 inches tall and you catch 18 or more leafhoppers then spray or harvest.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Perfection is our goal. Excellence will be tolerated."



A LOT TO COME BEFORE THAT!

A LOT TO COME BEFORE THAT!
August 8, 1999

Background Scripture:
Genesis 32:3 through 33:17
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 18:21-35

One of the spiritual mountaintops of the book of Genesis — in fact, of the whole Old Testament — is the single sentence in 33:4: "But Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, and fell on his neck and kissed him, and they wept."

Of course, there was a lot to come before that mountaintop! There is a considerable distance between where we left Jacob last week and we find him this week. Jacob, the cynical, scheming brother who cheated Esau of his birthright and blessing, the unrepentant scoundrel who had to flee his parental home and his doting mother to find safe lodging with his uncle in a far country. Then there was Esau, the man who was so impetuous and unmindful that he traded away his birthright and allowed his brother to defraud him of his blessing. Esau, at last goaded to fury, resolving to kill Jacob at his first opportunity.

The situation is not so different from ones we know of personally or read about every day — people alienated from one another and vowing to "get back at" those who have wronged them. The distance between husbands and wives, parents and children, brothers and sisters, neighbors and neighbors often seems unbreachable. That is the way it seemed for the family of Isaac estranged forever!

HOW LONG IS 'FOREVER'?

One of the things that lilfe may teach us, however, is that "forever" may not be as long a time as we think. Sometimes dysfunctional families can be helped to function constructively. Sometimes family breaches may be overcome. People are sometimes reconciled after a passage of time. People change and that which had seemed impossible now becomes possible.

In Jacob's life this did not happen overnight. On his way to his uncle Laban, he had that strange dream of a "ladder" reaching into the heavens. While he was with Laban, he found his own fradulent character mirrored in his uncle. He experienced what it was like to be deceived and cheated. He also found God's favor and, despite everything else, he grew exceptionally prosperous. In fact, he grew so prosperous that Laban had become dangerously jealous. He would have to go somewhere else.

But where should he go? Despite his fear of Esau, Jacob decided to go home. In a sense, he was not the same Jacob who fled his home. Because of God's promise, this "new Jacob" was ready to face the consequences of what he had done. He hoped that Esau would no longer seek to kill him. He was very fearful, but he set his face toward home.

STILL A SCHEMER!

In other ways, there was some of the "old Jacob" in the "new" one in that he still schemed and plotted. He would send a magnanimous present ahead to Esau — actually, a kind of reparations for what he had done. He would divide his large entourage into different sections several days apart, so that if Esau attacked one, the other might escape. He prayed to God: "Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand . . . of my brother . . ." (32:11). Then, at the River Jabbok he has a deep dreamlike spiritual experience, wresting with a being whom he later believes to have been the Lord Himself. The nocturnal Wrestler had given Jacob a new name, Israel, meaning "God strives" or "He who strives with God." The same, but a different Jacob — different enough to be given a new name and image.

Limping toward his brother's great array of men, Jacob appears to be a somewhat different man than the one who had run away. Up to this point it seems that Jacob is putting everyone before him for the sake of his own safety, but then the writer of Genesis says, "He himself went on before them bowing himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother" (33:3).

By the grace of God, the chasm between Jacob and Esau, between the old Jacob and the new Israel had been breached. Fearful enough, repentant enough, humble enough, Jacob/Israel was ready to face the gulf between them. "But Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, and fell on his neck and kissed him, and they wept."

DFA Spurs Industry Support of Dairy Relief Inc., Global Hunger Relief

Today's preoccupation with producing more milk, developing new dairy products and making the bottom line work, sometimes causes us to lose sight of real needs. In February, Dairy Relief Inc. (DRI), a nonprofit organization, was formed to help alleviate world hunger by providing dairy products for humanitarian aid.

With its first major grant of $50,000 from Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) and additional support from other dairy and agricultural organizations, DRI immediately began fulfilling its mission of relief here and abroad. Its efforts included:

- Establishing a grant to the Mennonite Central Committee of Akron, Pa., for delivery of nearly 7,500 pounds of nonfat milk powder to schools on the strife-torn West Bank of Palestine;
- Delivering approximately 20,000 pounds of buttermilk powder to Global Bridges, a Texas-based charity, for shipment to needy North Koreans for bread roll production;
- Shipping more than 39,900 pounds of nonfat dry milk to Honduran hurricane victims. (This DRI donation was made possible with the assistance of the David Livingstone/K.U.R.E. Foundation.)

"We've received contributions from many sources," says Tom Townsend, a retired dairy industry executive who serves as DRI vice president and chief executive officer. "Those contributions, along with matching funds from Dairy Farmers of America, have made it possible for DRI to make product purchases and work with other humanitarian organizations to put dairy products where they are needed most."

To date, DFA has matched more than $100,000 in contributions and DRI has generated more than $260,000 for humanitarian relief.

In coming months, DRI will focus on two fronts. "We'll be assembling additional shipments of dairy products and, at the same time, we will be actively seeking new donations," Townsend says. "We plan to reach and exceed our initial fund-raising goals in order to purchase and ship dairy products to hungry and undernourished people around the world. We hope this is only the beginning."

For more information about DRI or to make a tax-deductible contribution, contact Dairy Relief Inc., P.O. Box 1837, Springfield, MO 65801-1837, or talk to your local DFA representative.

It Takes the Best to Build the Best: Sukup

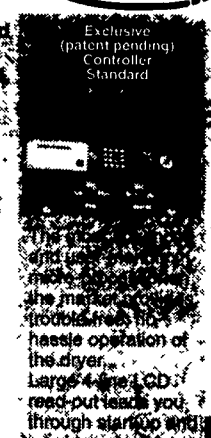
When Sukup decided to build an automatic grain dryer, we set out to build the best. And, with our 35 years of experience in the grain drying business, that's just what we did.

- The Sukup Automatic Grain Dryer produces higher quality grain due to the exclusive (patent pending) quad metering roll system which moves the grain closer to the heat through the dryer faster, resulting in less over-heating, moisture variation and temperature variations
- The Sukup Automatic Grain Dryer is the first dryer to have true moisture sensing of incoming and discharged grain built into the unit, it's not an after-thought or add-on.
- Metering roll speed is infinitely variable based upon the 3-minute average of the actual moisture content of the discharged grain
- Exclusive quad metering roll system produces more even moisture content.



Sukup Grain Dryer Column

Exclusive Quad Metering Roll System

The upper metering roll pulls the hotter grain closest to the inner screen through the dryer faster.

Faculty Work with Professional Societies

Lawrence D. Muller
The Pennsylvania State University
University Park, PA

Faculty members at Land Grant Universities are mandated to teach, conduct research, and do extension work or outreach. Most faculty at Penn State have responsibilities in two of these three major missions.

My responsibilities are with undergraduate teaching and research in the areas of dairy science with a focus on nutrition and management. Those of us involved with teaching also advise students, serve as advisors to curriculum clubs such as the Penn State Dairy Science Club, and work with various committees. While not "officially" having an extension appointment, many faculty in the department with research and teaching appointments engage in various extension-related activities and programs.

In addition faculty members are expected to be involved in public service activities, contributing in some way to the improvement of agriculture. This may include working with commodity groups, breed organizations, or producer groups at the local, state, national, or even international level.

Faculty members, most of whom belong to a professional organization, are encouraged to be active members. In my personal situation, I have been serving a one-year term as President of the American Dairy Science Association (ADSA). While it is an honor to be elected by one's peers to a position in a national and international organization, it comes with responsibilities and a time commitment.

What is ADSA?

The American Dairy Science Association (ADSA) was founded in 1906 and is a professional organization that serves the dairy and dairy related industries in the United States and internationally. ADSA is engaged in the scientific and technical support of the dairy industry through generation, dissemination, and exchange of information, and also in providing leadership and service.

Membership in ADSA totals nearly 5,000 worldwide, including 65 foreign countries. Within Pennsylvania, there are about 150 members including many nutrition consultants, agriculture professionals, university faculty, students, and dairy producers. ADSA is unique in that members come from both the dairy production and the dairy foods and processing areas.

ADSA Activities

The ADSA accomplishes its mission historically through two major functions; the ADSA annual meeting and the Journal of Dairy Science.

The ADSA annual meeting each year is attended by 1400 to 1800 people from all parts of the world. Most major agribusinesses representing the production and products/processing areas attend. Nearly 100 undergraduate students, including 15 to 20 from Penn State attend.

At these meetings, the latest cutting edge science-based research information is presented. This year, nearly 500 individual research and educational papers were presented including topics such as photoperiod, genetics of reproduction, physiological changes of high producing cows, folliculogenesis in the ovary, and feed additives to name a few.

Shelf life of dairy products and health and human safety concerns were two major areas in the Dairy Foods program. Featured symposiums included the importance of industry consultants, biosecurity, dry matter intake of lactating cows, genetic evaluation models, and nutrient management.

Many of the presentations will be published as manuscripts in the Journal of Dairy Science, a major scientific journal of the dairy industry, and is published monthly. The research and articles submitted for publication in the Journal are critically reviewed before acceptance for publication. Most of the management practices and technologies now used on a dairy farm were first published in the Journal before eventual adoption.

As one example, over 100 papers on different aspects of efficacy and use of bST have been published in the Journal of Dairy Science during the last 10 years. In fact, the early science-based information on growth hormone and dairy cattle was published in the Journal over 30 years ago. What new discovery or information published in each monthly issue or presented at a national meeting may be the next technology adopted by the dairy industry?

President of ADSA

My role as President is primarily to work with the Board of Directors and the Executive Director to conduct the business and activities of the association. The Board meets regularly by conference call and has frequent communications by phone or e-mail. Our goal is to establish or change policies and programs to help ADSA better achieve our goals in serving our clientele, the ultimate end users of our product-information.

Part of my role as president is to ensure that the many committees associated with the annual meeting, the Journal of Dairy Science, and the association are functioning properly. With the use of computer technology, receiving 7 to 10 e-mails per day related to ADSA activities is typical.

While the time commitment has been great, it has definitely been worth it because I personally feel that I have made a contribution to a professional organization that is extremely important to our dairy industry in the U.S. and internationally.

And yes, faculty members at Penn State should be involved with important public service activities in addition to our teaching, research, and extension activities. Within the Department of Dairy and Animal Science, there are many other faculty who have responsibilities with their professional societies.

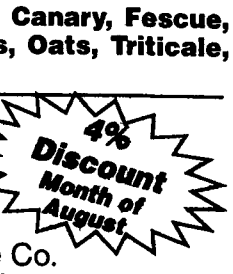
BARENBRUG great in grass

Forages For Profit

Do You Need Emergency Feed?



As a Cover crop, Green Spirit Italian Ryegrass blend from Barenbrug has yielded more and higher quality forage than Rye and Triticale, in trials in PA and MD

Tired of the way rye heads out and loses its quality so fast in spring? Would you like to have a rye that becomes denser and leafier after cutting/grazing instead of becoming stemmy? Would you like to have a ryelage that tests 26% protein with RFV of 175? (200 RFV at grazing height.) Try Barenbrug Green Spirit Italian Ryegrass blend!

Also works great no tilled into Alfalfa fields in fall for very high quality balage or hay next spring. Does not head out till approx. 2-3 weeks later than orchardgrass with much higher quality.

Can also be mixed with oats, rye or Triticale etc. 1 BU to 25 lbs. Green Spirit. Under ideal conditions Ryegrass can be grazed in 6 weeks.

Seed ryegrass at 35-45 lbs. an acre, from Aug. until mid-Oct. in Lancaster Co. PA.

In Addition: Consider Baralfa 54 From Barenbrug. In Penn State's trials in Landisville, PA Baralfa 54 had the #1 average.

Performance of annual and Italian ryegrass varieties for yield in Keedysville, MD 1998 Yields in pounds of dry matter per acre.

More and more research proves the added value of annual or Italian ryegrass over small grains. Research being done by Don Schwarz in Keedysville, Maryland shows the advantage of annual and Italian ryegrass over Triticale.

Feed value of Rye versus Ryegrass, on-farm trial Lancaster County, PA. In this trial the Green Spirit yielded 4500 pounds of dry-matter versus 2900 pounds of Rye. This was achieved by grazing it three times: early December and twice in April.

The quality of ryegrass is better than any small grain. It shows that 30 inch tall Green Spirit has a higher quality (TDN and NEL) than 30 inch tall rye.

Also Available: BG 34 Ryegrass, Baralfa 54 & 32-IQ Alfalfa, Red & Alice White Clover, Chicory, Bromes, Timothy, Reeds Canary, Fescue, Horsemaster, Orchardgrass, Kemal Festululolium, Mega Green Sudangrass, Hi Protein, Corn Brassicas, Forage Soybeans, Oats, Triticale, Cereal Rye, Blends for Intensive Grazing and more.

	CATTLE	CALVES
THIS WEEK	2653	1802
LAST WEEK	2599	1836
LAST YEAR	2519	1797

CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers and heifers ended the week .50 to mostly 1.00 higher. This week's advances were produced solely from an increase in local demand, as neither dressed beef nor futures prices warranted such strength. Western feeders sold cattle steady to weak at mostly 65.00 and 102.00-103.00. The market continues to defy the usual late summer slump and if prices can only hold their own for another month or so, additional strength should return for the fall. Local Holstein steers managed to close .50 higher this week. The slaughter cow market turned sharply higher on strong boneless beef and reduced Southeast runs to close 3.00-4.00 higher. Slaughter bulls ended steady to 1.00 higher. Supply included 47 percent slaughter steers, 7 percent slaughter heifers, 34 percent slaughter cows, 4 percent slaughter bulls, with the balance made up of feeder cattle.

how do we sort through all of it?" Conneman asked.

"Stressed spelled backward is 'Desserts,'" Conneman said of the need for the agricultural community to learn how to reverse stress in their lives.

"Be informed but avoid extremes," Conneman said. He pointed out that doing nothing is actually a decision and is extreme action of the part of farmers.

Collaboration is paramount for evaluating new technology and changes, according to Conneman.

"Rarely is a problem solved by one expert. You need a team," he said.

Implementing change is not an easy task and one that is often complicated by the reaction of spouses and employees. Involve partners and family members when thinking about changes to counteract the personal impact change has on those involved. Celebrate whenever changes are made with coffee, doughnuts, or luncheons to help employees see changes in a positive perspective.

Financial inmpact must be a deciding factor. "But you can't manage what you can't measure," Conneman said. "You can't continue doing something just because you love it and do it well if you can't market it."

Some important questions to ask are, "What problems is this new technology trying to solve and will it create new problems?"

Structural changes in production agriculture enable farmers to produce higher yields and require better marketing.

"You can be small but you can't think and act small. You must market like the big guys," Conneman said.

Scott Davenport of Agway's new TSPF heifer service, Jerry Hostetter of Hostetter (swine) Management, Reid McCarthy of Atlantic Greenhouses, Inc., and Richard Waybright of Mason Dixon Farms Inc. each shared how they were incorporating changes for the companies they represented in order to better meet the needs.

"It's a consumer-driven industry whether we like it or not. The customer wants both quality and cheap food," said Hostetter.

Environmental issues can be a win-win situation for both the ag community and environmentalists, Hostetter said. He believes that technology will enable the odor problem to be resolved within the next two to three years.

McCarthy reported on how he founded Atlantic Greenhouses Inc., a wholesale greenhouse operation headquartered in Pipersville. Founded in 1992, the company employs 300 people. Constant changes are introduced to enable the company to prepare for the boom period predicted in the floriculture industry. The floriculture industry has experienced a remarkable 7.1 percent growth in the past five years and is considered recession-proof.

To counteract the problems with maintaining a seasonal workforce, Atlantic has installed a mechanical transplanter and robots.

Savings are significant. The transplanter plants 750 flats per hour with two to three people compared to a manual transplanting line that takes 14 people to plant 350 bedding plants per hour.

"Robots can load and unload all day long faster than people," McCarthy said of one robot that can fill the place of six people.

"Change is inevitable but success is optional," Waybright said. He credits an ag teacher with teaching him how to "think," which today enables the Waybright family to farm 2,000 acres, milk 2,000 cows, and employ 50 people on their Mason Dixon Farms, Inc.

Waybright believes the dairy industry created health problems such as Johne's disease by the "barns we use."

Recently he has been inspired to work on a new design to create a more efficent livestock barn.

While many farmers detest environmental laws neccesitating changes, Waybright said, "Most environmental changes that are mandated can reduce costs, not raise them."

Waybright frowns on the idea to educate the consumer about how hard it is to farm. "They don't care. They just want good food. . . consistent and the cheapest," Waybright said. "The marketplace tells what they will pay for the product and you must comply."

The solution is to raise proficency and to fine-tune the business to reduce costs. Labor is the highest cost and the Waybrights are constantly thinking of ways to become more proficent.

Waybright said that it is exciting to see more food produced on less acreage, which enables more land to lay in its natural state. "Nature has a way of healing itself," Waybright said.

Mason Dixon Farms is successful today, Waybright believes, because they ignore doomsayers. In 1976, the Waybrights built a new dairy center although they were told that it wasn't a good (economical) time.

"I've learned if someone agrees with me, it probably isn't worth doing," Waybright said.

He is pleased that his four sons have chosen to remain on the farm.

"If your farm is profitable, they (children) will stay on the farm and will figure out how to get along with each other," Waybright said.

A panel composed of Waybright, Davenport, Hostetter, and McCarthy, answered questions from the audience.

"How do you respond to the belief that large-scale farming is ruining it for the family farm?" someone asked.

Hostetter responded that most of these operations started small and expanded to keep the next generation involved; thus it continues to be a family farm. A unified voice is needed in agriculture and infighting must be eliminated, Hostetter said.

"Small producers must understand that the big producer is really helping him," said Kenneth Schoenberg, director for Land O' Lakes.

"How do you merge with enemy?" was asked in reference to organizations that once competed and now combined.

"For the good of all, you learn to collaborate. Regionalization disappears eventually with consolidation in the boardroom," Schoenberg said. Communication is the key no matter what the position.

Randall Meabon, president of the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives (PCC) and Erie County farmer, told how his own life had been shaped by PCC and the continual need to provide agriculture education to youth and leaders.

He said, "In this century we have gone from the buggy to supersonic jet travel. I can hardly imagine what the next century will bring."

Meabon and nine directors of PCC reported on changes within their organizations and how mergers and joint ventures have created both positive and negative results.

Youth education continues to be a priority for the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives. This year 12 youth from FFA and 4-H programs were given scholarships to attend the annual National Institute Cooperative Education (NICE) in Utah. Julie Fulton, an FFA student from Cumberland County, told of the value she received as last

Landis Bros.' John Deere Dealership Changes Hands

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Ownership has recently changed at Landis Bros. Inc, the John Deere agricultural and commercial/consumer product dealership in Lancaster and Lebanon counties.

The new owners are to be Ken Dietz and Glenn Moyer, who announced on Monday that they, along with minority investors Greg and Daron Rebar, have reached final agreement to purchase the 79-year-old John Deere dealership.

The dealership has two locations — the dealership in Lancaster at routes 772 and 283, and an additional sales and service center on Evergreen Road in Lebanon County.

According to a news release, Landis Bros. Inc. has grown to 40 employees since its 1920 establishment, when Elmer and Ben Landis purchased the J.H. Mowrer Farm Machinery Business.

Ben Landis died in the early 1940s, and Elmer continued on his own until 1960, when, in failing health, he incorporated the business.

At the time of incorporation, he took in 12 employees as partners.

In 1988, the remaining three employee-partners sold to another employee group, consisting of Herb Noll, Mark Weaver, and Phil Wimer. These three will now be employees of the new ownership.

The Lebanon County location was added to Landis Bros. in 1994.

Of the two majority partners, Dietz grew up on a Lehigh County dairy farm, and established close ties with the Lancaster and Lebanon communities during a 15-year employment with New Holland.

The last 5 years he worked for Deere & Co., most recently residing in Columbus, Ohio.

"Lancaster and Lebanon areas feel like home, and we are excited about moving back to this area and becoming part of the local community again," Dietz said.

"The people are great, and there is not a finer place to raise a family," he said.

"The business will continue with the same experienced employees and the same product and service offerings to serve our customers," Deitz said. "The only things we want to change are things that employees and customers identify as ways to raise our level of service. We want to launch into the 21st Century as an even stronger customer-focused business."

Dietz is to leave Deere & Co. to manage the day-to-day operations of Landis Brothers Inc.

Glenn Moyer's ties to agriculture also started during his youth in Lehigh County.

He said he recalls "the many hours spent stacking hay bales and working in the fields on the Dietz Farm."

He has lived in central Pennsylvania on several occasions and continues to have strong ties to the region.

Of the minority investors, "Gregg and Daron Rebar bring excellent support and resources to the new organization as minority owners," Dietz said.

"They grew up in their father's (Skip Rebar) Deere dealership in Clayton, Delaware, where Daron currently manages with his father.

"Greg Rebar ventured out two years ago, and purchased his own Deere dealerships in Whiteford, Maryland, and Oxford, Pennsylvania."

eral disaster area.

Some federal legislators, but really most involved in assessing the drought conditions, consider that the entire state should be considered a federal disaster area.

Also this week, the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board held a hearing to consider possible changes to the over-order premium.

Requests varied somewhat, but generally the gist of the requests is for abandonment of the sliding scale premium that is tied into the Basic Formula Price, in favor of a straight 40-cent premium for September.

The sliding scale premium is adjusted penny for penny above a BFP minimum. It appears, because of BFP futures prices, that the sliding-premium formula would allow no over-order premium for that month.

Though corn grain prices remained low, most dairy farmers in southcentral and southeastern portion of the state who raise their own corn have little to harvest for silage, much less for grain.

An exception to that is probably in the northwestern section of Pennsylvania, where, as of several weeks ago, according to Erie County Penn State Cooperative Extension Agent George Wilcox, the corn crop was strong.

Earlier storms that traveled up the Ohio Valley skirted the main of the state, but regularly brought precipitation to the northwestern counties.

Wilcox did say that streams were low and in some areas wells were going dry.

On July 28, during the last official day of the Lebanon Area Fair, an emergency drought meeting was held at the fairgrounds, with speakers that included Cooperative Extension Senior Research Associate John Yocum of the Penn State University Field Research Laboratory farm in Landisville; regional Extension Agricultural Economic Agent John Rutherford; and Lebanon County's USDA Farm Service Agency Director Jennifer Hershey.

As far as commonly raised feed crops, Yocum said, "Corn is done. We've written it off at the research farm."

Dead and dying corn in the field in Lancaster and Lebanon counties ranges from late-planted fields turned brown, and earlier planted fields also browning quickly, past hope for any ear development or additional growth, despite any amount of rainfall.

According to state agriculture department staff and others who have traveled through the region including Lehigh, Berks, Bucks, and Chester counties, that region has been especially hard hit.

For those depending upon corn to feed livestock, the good news is that grain corn prices are still low.

However, for salvaging plants in the field, each grower has to decide for himself what to do.

Because of nitrate poisoning concerns, all crops intended as forages should be tested before feeding to cattle.

Nitrate poisoning becomes a concern during a drought, because when rain does fall, the water picks up the unused nitrogen fertilizer in the soil that the crop plants would have used had it not been for the drought.

That water gets sucked up by the thirsty plant, bringing with it a high load of nitrogen.

If the concentration of nitrogen, as nitrate, is high enough, any cattle eating the plant can die quickly.

After a number of days, the plant uses up enough of the nitrate so that the plant is again safe forage. Testing is the only way to be sure.

The corn plants in the field can be chopped for ensiling, though the energy feed value is low. Ensiling, however, can reduce the amount of nitrates in the drought corn significantly. According to Yocum, up to 50 percent of the nitrates can be removed through ensiling.

Numerous Penn State Extension news releases have been issued advising caution about nitrates and the benefits of ensiling.

Known for drought-tolerance, soybeans, on the other hand, still have a fairly good chance to survive, given some rain in the next weeks, according to Yocum.

The major concern for soybeans, he said, was spider mite, a pest normally associated with damage to ornamentals and especially to indoor plants.

Rainfall will wash them off, and stimulate the growth of a fungus that will kill them, Yocum said.

However, with the lack of rain, the mites have migrated from adjacent field borders and are damaging stands of soybean to the point of causing a discoloration, called "bronzing."

Yocum said that almost every field of soybeans that he has seen in Lancaster and Lebanon counties has bronzing, and that it is the result of spider mites.

He recommended that farmers scout their fields for spider mites and then spray with Lorsban, or a pesticide containing dimethoate.

According to Yocum, it would take a rainfall of a third- to a half-inch or more of rain to wash off the pesticides, so a light rain wouldn't necessarily require immediate reapplication.

After spraying, fields should be scouted every seven days and if more mites are found, then reapplication of the pesticides should be done, if necessary.

The spider mite releases a spider web-strand-like string that serves as a kite to carry the insect with the wind to new feeding locations. The rate of travel is not excessively fast or far, but fast enough, he explained.

He suggested that some farmers, depending on the rate of infestation, may be able to get away with spraying the edges of their fields to create a barrier from mites coming in from adjoining grass and hay fields, as long as the interior of the soybean field has not been infected.

However, he said that was the only immediate concern regarding soybeans.

As far as alfalfa, most of which has bloomed much earlier than normal because of the excessive heat, should be cut if it is at half bloom or more.

He said that should be done to prevent the alfalfa plants from spending valuable reserve energy in unecessary seed-making.

Furthermore, he said that alfalfa fields should be scouted for leaf hopper and sprayed if the pests are present, because of the additional stress to the alfalfa plant may well kill it.

"It is particularly critical for new seedings, any made this spring," he said.

Yocum said that for each specific crop in each field, the farmer has to decide for himself whether it makes good business sense to spend money to treat them. If there is no more significant rain until the fall, the soybeans may die also.

The expense of time, fuel and treatment has to be weighed against the value of the crop, the potential of its yield, and the alternatives.

In other news, the state USDA FSA has posted Internet information about the process for requesting drought crop disaster assistance, which is being done.

There are seven stages outlined in the current process for documenting drought loss in order to establish a foundation for possibly having the entire state declared a federal disaster area, which would trigger federal emergency loan assistance as well as eligibility for several other programs and any disaster aid:

- The USDA county emergency boards, which are chaired by the Farm Service Agency, and which consist of leaders of USDA offices at the local level, prepare an assessment of county crop losses.
- The county emergency boards review the reports and forward them to the state emergency board, chaired by the USDA FSA in Harrisburg.
- The state emergency board (SEB) meets and verifies the information. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service also participate. The SEB must find that data indicates that one or more crops have suffered a substantial loss in order to determine that disaster conditions exist. This determination can be made for a single county or group of counties.
- The state Farm Service Agency submits reports to the Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture, who recommends that the governor send a formal request to the U.S. secretary of agriculture.
- The U.S. secretary of agriculture approves or disapproves the request. If approved, he makes available the Emergency Loan Assistance Program.
- In addition, the damage assessment reports provide a basis for establishing areas in which particular crops, not eligible for crop insurance purchased by farmers, may be eligible for compensation for production losses.
- Once programs are available, farmers can apply for assistance through the Farm Service Agency in their county. The phone number can be found in the blue section of the telephone book under "U.S. Department of Agriculture."

According to John Cameron with the Pennsylvania office of the USDA FSA, — the county emergency boards have been forwarding county damage assessment reports, and the state emergency board is to look at the assessments this coming week.

In the meantime, USDA Under Secretary Gus Shumacher was to have toured parts of Berks and Schuylkill counties on Friday to see firsthand the damage from the drought.

Emergency haying and grazing assistance kicked in more this week, with 15 counties being added to the list on Thursday.

Emergency haying and grazing is a form of federal relief that allows those who participate in the Conservation Reserve Program to allow farmers to cut hay on, or to allow animals to graze on land set aside for conservation reasons.

FSA county committees can initiate requests for such allowances, they are forwarded to the state who then makes a recommendation to the USDA deputy administrator for Farm Programs.

Approval for haying and/or grazing is then made on a county-by-county basis.

On Thursday, 19 counties approved for emergency haying and grazing were: Bedford, Butler, Carbon, Centre, Clarion, Clearfield, Clinton, Dauphin, Jefferson, Luzerne, McKean, Monroe, Potter, Schuylkill, Somerset, Venango, Warren, Washington, and Westmoreland.

In addition to the Emergency Loan Assistance and Emergency Haying and Grazing Assistance programs, others that may be available include the Crop Loss Disaster Assistance Program, The Emergency Conservation Program, and The Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program.

For more information contact a local USDA FSA office or a Cooperative Extension office.

Those with access to the Internet should visit the PDA site at www.pda.state.pa.us and the USDA FSA site at www.fsa.usda.gov/edso/pa/pa.htm.

An an emergency drought meeting at the Lebanon Area Fair, John Yocum, senior research associate at the Penn State University Field Research Laboratory in Landisville, holds a spider-mite damaged example of soybean, and discusses farmer options and considerations for their drought-damaged crops.

Talking To Children About Tough Times

FARGO, N.D. — Many families are faced with financial concerns that are causing changes in how the family lives.

Some families are facing unemployement or job layoffs, some are caught in the middle of the business downsizing trend, others were dealt a disaster due to weather-related problems that reduced their income, and still others are faced with the possibility of losing their business, farm and/or home.

Making changes isn't easy for adults or for children.

People become used to a certain lifestyle or quality of life and rarely think about the potential for it to end. It's human nature to resist and fear changes that approach when income is reduced or lifestyle or location must change.

Adults often try to keep these difficulties from children, hoping that they either won't really notice or that they will not be bothered or affected by it.

The adults become so absorbed in the difficulties that they forget the rest of the family might be in pain also. As an adult, it just seems to be the natural thing to do.

What About The Children?

Whenever major life changes happen to a family, everyone in the family is affected in some way, and some are affected more than others.

Keep in mind that a family is a system with many parts that affect one another.

For example, think of the family as a mobile on a baby crib. If you pull one of the objects on the mobile, the entire mobile will shift or dance. Each part is affected by happens to one part but at varying degrees.

So it is with families. Each person is affected differently by the impact of a reduced income or changed lifestyle.

(Turn to Page A29)

Talking To Children

The way change affects each family member depends on their age and ability to understand the seriousness of the situation, their personality and how they cope with distressing news, and the severity of the change.

When adults keep information from their children, they open the door for mixed messages, confusion and tension. Kids are able to pick up on the tension and stress that the adults are experiencing. They know something is wrong, even though they may not know what it is. They may think that they are somehow to blame.

Children may hear you say things are fine, but see the distress in your face, hear it in the tone of your voice, and experience it in your lack of patience with them and others.

Parents should admit their concerns to their children and stress their abilities to cope with the situation.

In most cases, it is best to be honest and open with your children about what is happening to you and the family.

However, it may not be necessasry to share information in less important situations and for the very young child (age 0-3). Express feelings in simple words and reassure your child that you are in charge of the problem and they are not.

Think about your options carefully and make a decision you can live with.

Once you have resolved yourself to the need for change, begin to think about the real message you want to send your children. Some of the points to consider:

- It's not the children's fault. Remind them that they are not responsible for what's happening.
- The family will need to be make some changes, and you will appreciate their cooperation.
- Many decisions will need to be made. Children will be involved in discussion but must remember that the adults will need to make difficult choices that are in the interest of the entire family. Not everyone will appreciate every decision.
- Your children's ideas are welcome and respected. Appreciate their helping out and do not ridicule their ideas, regardless of what they are. Point out the helpful parts and explain why other parts are not workable. Listen.
- No matter what happens, there is no problem so great that together you and your family cannot work through it. To get through this, the family must be open to seeking out whatever help is available.
- This is a temporary situation. Keep the "big picture" in mind, and work toward the end goals set by the family. Keep the children informed about progress and what to expect. Pull together and make it through.
- The most important thing you can do for each other is simply to listen and then help the others turn their thoughts in a positive direction.

If there is a lack of communication and information, children of all ages will naturally "fill in the blanks" themselves, and this is rarely accurate or positive.

Some children react immediately; others bottle it up and explode when you least expect it. Pay attention to any major changes in mood, behavior, friendships, eating or sleeping patterns. Point out changes, talk often and call for help (pediatrician, clergy member, school counselor, hotlines, etc.) if you are concerned.

Point out what will remain the same (family living place, pets, school) as well as what will change (no vacation, new job, fewer outings/clothes).

Ask your children for patience. It's your job to worry about money, jobs and housing. It's their job to do well in school and help out wherever possible at home.

Avoid panic. Problems are for solving, not reacting in panic. This situation may be the most difficult one you've had to face in your life, and it's an opportunity to teach your children how to handle problems and move on in life. This may be the greatest lesson they ever observe you teaching them.

Review what you have. Consider all your assets — family, friends, community support, religious faith. Work hard to avoid a negative mindset or bitter attitude.

How Can I Begin To Explain

The following list gives an idea of what specific words you could use to explain these complex issues to your children at various ages. These are just ideas to get you started. Use words and ideas you are comfortable with and used to using.

Remember: Age divisions are based on average development. You know your child best and you must determine what will work best for your child.

Weather-Related Disaster

Ages 5-8

I want to tell you about something that is happening because of the poor crop we had. I've been working on the books, and things are going to be very tight in our budget. I don't want you to be scared or to think that you were the cause.

It means that we need to be really careful about our spending and that I might be frustrated and upset sometimes. But I know we can figure this out. And we can help remind each other of what is really important, like family and friends — not things.

Ages 9-13

You've been helping out with farmwork, more each year, and I know you're aware of how the weather took its toll on the crops last year. I bet you've heard me talk about the drop in income too. I want you to know that things are more serious now. We aren't sure how things will work out yet, but it's going to be really tight spending for a while. Here's what I'm thinking . . . I know we'll all be OK if we just have patience and work together.

Ages 14-18

It's no secret that this past year was a really poor income year. You saw the damage from the weather and you saw me worry. Now I'm even more aware of how much this has set us back financially. Things are really tough right now, and I've been thinking of some things we need to do, like . . . What do you think? . . . I know you have plans for college, and I don't want you to worry about it yet. Together I know we'll figure out a way to make it work.

Strong, Dominating Hogs, Experienced Exhibitors Rule Schuylkill Fair

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

SUMMIT STATION (Schuylkill Co.) — Briana Shealer, Auburn, knew what she saw some time ago, before she brought a feisty, dominating pig into the show ring.

The hog, which grew into a hefty 259 pounds, was real strong when it was born, she said. As it grew, it would "run around a lot, always dominating the barn," said Briana.

That same Hampshire crossbred gilt, nicknamed "Sheera," dominated the show ring at the Schuylkill County Fair Wednesday, winning grand champion.

Robert Dinsmore, show judge, a Hampshire and Shropshire sheep breeder, and a sales representative for Ceresville New Holland, noted the hog is a "heavily structured pig and a sound-made pig," before picking the champion.

Dinsmore later told Lancaster Farming the hog was the heaviest made pig in the ring, a "good combination of all things we look for — a shape to the top, a big ham, and relatively lean for a pig of that size."

Briana, 16, is the daughter of Paul and Sharon Shealer, Auburn. Briana, a junior at Blue Mountain High School, is president of the Blue Mountain 4-H Club, a club formed in January that numbers about 14 members.

The champion, from the heavyweight class, group 5, was nicknamed in honor, of sorts, of classic TV cartoon heroes — its sidekick is named "He-Man." It's strength is what gave the hog its name.

Briana also picked up market lamb champion in the 4-H show earlier in the week.

The reserve, a 241-pound hog from the light medium weight class, group 3, was shown by Zach Cornman, Pine Grove. At 240 pounds, that's "right where they should be" in terms of weight, noted Dinsmore.

The "long, leveled-made pig," he said, had the right frame size, noted Dinsmore, who was a member of the Maryland State 4-H Livestock Judging Team in Maryland in 1993.

Zach Cornman, 16, is the son of Kathy and Allen Cornman, Pine Grove. Zach, the vice president of the Schuylkill Stampede 4-H Club, named the pig "Smeltzer."

Said Zach, "My sister told me to name it that after her roommate at college," he said. Zach has won reserve champion at the fair before and shows dairy beef and goats.

There were a total of 15 exhibitors and 32 hogs at the show.

The same day the fair also hosted several other livestock contests, including market steers and dairy beef. The fair also posted the results of its market goats and lambs, held the previous days.

Market Steers

Dinsmore also judged several other shows, including the market steer classes.

The judge pointed to the lightweight steer exhibited by Naomi Schaeffer, Bernville. "I like the shape of the hip on the lightweight steer," he said, naming it champion.

The steer, weighing 1,100 pounds, won group 1 of the class.

Naomi, 16, daughter of Rod and Lena, Bernville, nicknamed the Maine Anjou/Angus crossbred "Buster" after her grandmother, Pearl, suggested it.

Naomi is home-schooled.

Reserve champion, weighing 1,360 pounds from the heavyweight division, was shown by Paul Shealer, Auburn. Paul, 15, is the son of Paul and Sharon Shealer, Auburn.

Paul, who also won market goat champion, nicknamed the purebred Angus "Nimrod," he said, "because he's insane."

The sophomore at Blue Mountain High School said that he spent some time, about 20 minutes, getting the steer ready for the final event.

Paul has won champion steer at the fair in the past. He was considered exhibiting at the state Farm Show in January.

Dairy Beef

Dinsmore also judged the dairy beef show at the Schuylkill County Fair.

He said that when picking for champion, he is "looking for calves that are fast-growing and can put on muscle." Dinsmore pointed out the champion, with simply "too much product" to ignore.

The champion was shown by Josh Hepler, Pitman. The 750-pound heavyweight champion of group 5 was nicknamed "Big Daddy."

This was the second time Josh, 19, son of James and Rachel Hepler, Pitman, won at the fair — he was champion two years ago, he said.

Josh, a Tri Valley High School Graduate, said he fed the calf a diet high in protein and energy. The Jan. 2 feeder is part of his FFA supervised agriculture experience project, of which he spends about 65-70 hours working on each year.

Josh's mother, Rachel, said Josh spent about three hours Sunday night clipping the dairy beef for the contest.

Reserve of the show went to Richard Luckenbill III, 13, son of Donna and Richard Luckenbill, Schuylkill Haven. The eighth grade Blue Mountain Middle School student showed his 580-pound, light heavyweight, group 4 winner to reserve.

Richard nicknamed his dairy beef animal "Gizmo."

There were 35 exhibitors and 35 animals at the show.

Market Goats, Lambs

In the market goat show, Paul Shealer, Auburn, won champion.

Reserve was shown by Keith Kramer, Schuylkill Haven.

In the market lamb 4-H show, Briana Shealer, Auburn, won champion in group 2, with a lamb weighing 105 pounds. Reserve went to Kori Morgan, Pine Grove, from the same group, weighing 110 pounds.

In the lamb open show, Jill Neiman, Fleetwood, won champion out of group 4, with a lamb weighing 120 pounds. Reserve went to Briana Shealer with a lamb weighing 116 pounds.

Following is a list of placings from the different livestock contests at the fair.

Maryland Crowns State Dairy Princess

FREDERICK, Md. — Taneytown's Jeena Rinehart is the new Maryland Dairy Princess. The 16-year-old was crowned during the 38th annual pageant at the Holiday Inn Frederick on Thursday, July 22. Rinehart represented Carroll County in the contest. The title was passed on by 1998-99 state princess Erin Feuillet of Damascus.

Laura Kramer of Forest Hill, representing the Upper Chesapeake region, captured the Alternate Maryland Dairy Princess title. Other regional princesses vying for the crown were Allegany and Garret County's Christina Steyer of Oakland; Frederick County's Sadah Bentz of Thurmont; South Central's Trisha Malone of Boyds; and Washington County's Erin Shank of Hagerstown.

In addition to the state sash, Rinehart won the best skit award for her magic carpet ride to "Dairyland." The best radio spot honor and Miss Congeniality award went to Shank, while Bentz captured the scholarship prize.

The 1999-2000 Maryland Dairy Princess is the daughter of John and Sharon Rinehart and hails from a 400-acre Holstein dairy farm. She is an active member of 4-H and FFA and will be a senior at Francis Scott Key High School this fall. Rinehart was a member of the state 4-H dairy judging team last year that competed on the national level at World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis. The same team also competed in Louisville, Ky., where Rinehart captured the first place individual title and was tops in oral reasons. She now helps coach her county's dairy judging team.

The princess has also taken numerous county and state honors in fashion revue, public speaking and fitting and showing. She enjoys singing and being part of the drama club at school.

Rinehart plans to major in agricultural communications/public relations when she enters a four-year college.

Kramer is an active FFA member at Harford Technical High School and is the daughter of Mike and Lesley Kramer. She has also been a 4-H Ambassador and has participated in 4-H dairy judging, dairy product judging and dairy bowl. She has won the Star Chapter Greenhand and Chapter Farmer awards and has attended the FFA leadership conference. The new state alternate plans to attend Texas A&M, majoring in dairy and beef production science.

Regional princesses from the prevous year were awarded monetary incentive honors. They were Miss Feuillet, Erin Kernan of the Upper Chesapeake region, Jennifer Seiss of Frederick County, and April Enlow of Allegany-Garrett. Miss Feuillet won the scrapbook award.

Empire Farm Days Highlight

Included are unique events, such as skid steer dances, bandsaw demonstrations, fence building, hay management, mixer wagons, combining, and others.

Billed by exhibit organizers, sponsored by the Empire State Potato Growers, Inc, based in Stanley, N.Y., as the "Northeast's Largest Farm Show," the event was attended by 75,000 farmers and agri-industry representatives last year.

This year marks the 13th year the Rodman Lott and Son Farm will host the Empire Farm Days, in its 66th year. This the fifth year of a 25-year relationship between the Empire State Potato Growers, Inc. and the farm to host the event.

Farming in Seneca County are Ralph Lott, wife Shirley, and their children Nicole, Rodman, and Benjamin. Continuing with the tradition started by his parents, Ralph and Shirley became sole operators upon Rodman's "retirement" a few years ago. However, both Rodman and wife Ellen are still active and involved in the farm operation.

The family history of farming began when Rodman and Ellen Lott set up a crop operation in Pennsylvania from 1954-1968. In 1960 they also operated a 400-acre soybean operation in Delaware.

In 1968 they moved to the panhandle of Florida and raised peanuts, beef cattle, and pigs. Twelve years later the Lotts found themselves settled in Seneca Falls.

Rodman and Ellen have four grown children: Ralph, Ginny, Mark, and Lisie.

In Seneca County, agriculture is by far the most important economic sector in the county, contributing a value production of more than $35 million. The Finger Lakes area includes scenic lakes, state parks, historic sites, wine trails, restaurants, and lots of hospitality.

The site is located just south of the village on Rt. 414.

As far back as 1931, there has been an agricultural show sponsored by the Empire State Potato Growers, Inc., hosted by New York State farmers and committed to bringing the latest techniques and equipment to farmers.

Since then the annual event has undergone many changes, including name, location, and size, but its sponsor and purpose have remained constant.

The event brings the farmers and agribusiness communities together, all in one place, all at one time, at a high quality agricultural trade show.

Creating a farm show that is flexible is key to the success of Empire Farm Days, according to Melanie Wickham, show manager.

The show has expanded to accommodate new exhibitors and more exciting exhibits.

Managing the expansion is a "wonderful challenge to have," said Wickham. "It is an indication that agribusinesses are looking to Empire Farm Days as a place to showcase innovation, new products, and technology. It also tells us that they are able to connect with and talk to qualified customers at the show — one of the primary goals."

The exhibit area will be expanded on the east side of the show and will include the addition of electrical poles. By changing some of the field plantings and rearranging exhibits, the expansion will not affect the field demonstrations.

"The ability to have the field demonstrations close to the exhibit area is a plus for the show," she said. "We were able to expand without a major disruption to the demonstration acreage."

Wickham noted that as the show increases in size, similar exhibits have been consolidated. Trams are provided to move people throughout the show. Information booths are located at all corners to allow visitors to plan an efficient and productive visit to the show, she noted.

The New York State Grange has scheduled a series of events, beginning Tuesday, Aug. 10 and lasting through Thursday, Aug. 12.

They include programs on farm decorating, New York farms, the Seneca County Historical Society, the Cornell University Extension Service on health cooking, a representative from the Council on Alcoholism, and other events.

At the Farm Bureau Family Center, visitors will have a chance to visit "Farm Corner" to get the "feel" for milking with "Li'l Belle," the herd replica. The Oneida County "Wheel of Agriculture" tests participants' knowledge of agriculture.

Commodity exhibits include grapes, maple, soy, and forest products.

Empire Farm Days originated as Potato Field Days in 1931. In 1964 the show was named the Potato Field Day and Farm Materials exhibition and was hosted by Humphreys Farm, Hartford. In 1965, co-hosts were McCormick Farms and William Gozelski, Gainsville.

In 1966, co-hosts were Russell Mathews and Monroe County Department of Parks, Mendon.

In 1967, because of the scope of coverage, the name Empire Farm Days was adopted. Since then, many other farms have hosted the event. The farm has been hosted by Rodman Lott and Son since 1988.

Industry's Changes

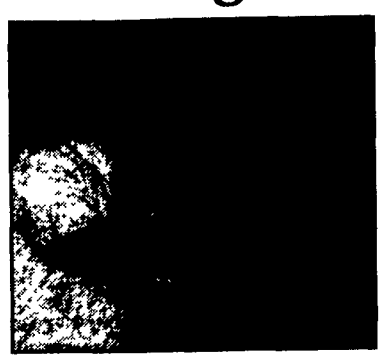
year's scholarship recipient.

Sam Minor, dairy producer, co-op director, and restauranteur, led a session on "managing the madness" and how to make sense of all that is happening in agriculture.

He challenged participants to look at the positives instead of dwelling on the negatives.

"How often have you heard there is too much government control, or the government won't do anything for the farmer, or rules, regulations, and paperwork will kill us?" Minor asked.

He reminded the audience that the U.S. has the most wholesome and lowest priced food in the world.



Sam Minor

It's a tremendous time to be in farming, Minor said, reminding the audience of the new products being developed with nutriceuticals and pharmaceuticals, of one man being able to milk 120 cows per hour, of good economical factors, and trade opportunities.

With all the discusssion about change, Conneman pointed out some things that have not changed: "Farming is risky. Always was and is not more risky now than before, in my opinion," Conneman said of unpredictable weather, demand, and prices.

Tioga County Field Day: Pasture Productivity, On-Farm Research

quent growth. The cows don't stay put more than a day or two, he said.

Cows on grass, even under the most ideal weather and growing conditioners, means the farmer must be critically aware of pasture fertility, as that translates to cow health and milk production levels.

Kick-a-Moo is part of an on-farm demonstration project, details of which will be presented at the field day, that is measuring grass growth. The data collected from this farm and others across the state will be used to illustrate how variable growth is, how intensive grazing programs can be more appropriately managed, and how graziers need to be prepared to adapt to changing conditions.

Tioga County Cooperative Extension Agent Craig Williams, project overseer, stresses the importance of "keeping forage primed so it is ready to respond to moisture." The data already collected shows how quickly that can happen — if the grass is in the right stage when it receives the moisture.

The field day is scheduled from 10 a.m. t0 2 p.m. Lunch will be available for purchase, with the proceeds supporting the local 4-H club that is providing the food.

Kick-a-Moo is about 10 miles west of Wellsboro. Take Route 660 west toward Leonard Harrison State Park at the Pennsylvania Grand Canyon. The Tomlinson farm is on the right, just past the Yellow Basket Shop. For more information contact Craig Williams at (570) 724-9120 or Kate Francis at PASA (814) 349-9856.

Empire Days Continues To Expand

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. — Empire Farm Days continues to grow and expand in response to an increase in new exhibitors and a desire by current exhibitors to create larger, more exciting exhibits.

Managing the expansion is a "wonderful challenge to have," said show manager Melanie Wickham. "It is an indication that agribusinesses are looking to Empire Farm Days as a place to showcase innovation, new products and technology.

It also tells us that they are able to connect with and talk to qualified customers at the show–one of the primary goals."

Creating a farm show that is flexible is key to the success of Empire Farm Days Being able to meet the changing needs of agribusiness and farmers is a continuing process.

The exhibit area will be expanded on the east side of the show and will include the addition of electrical poles By changing some of the field plantings and rearranging exhibits, the expansion will not affect the field demonstrations.

"The ability to have the field demonstrations close to the exhibit area is a plus for the show We were able to expand without a major disruption to the demonstration acreage," said Wickham.

Empire Farm Days gives farmers the unique opportunity to experience the latest in agricultural technology, all in one place and all at one time. With more than 600 exhibitors, Empire Farm Days offers today's Northeast farmer more than 3,000 brand names to look over. They can talk with the people responsible for making it all happen – the manufacturers and representatives for the thousands of agricultural products and services available to today's farmer. They can touch, see, and examine the actual products and equipment.

Action is the name of the game at Empire Farm Days Exhibitors pull out all the stops to show Northeast farmers what's new and innovative. Many exhibitors actually demonstrate their products and services right on their exhibitor lots and adjacent fields. Tractor safety, skid steer dances, bandsaws, fence building, hay management, mixer wagons, combining, building construction, antique tractors, vegetable and fruit specialty equipment, livestock handling, crop and breed displays, dairy and livestock equipment, are just a sampling of what is happening and available on each individual lot.

Recognizing the importance of the Northeast as one of the three major dairy regions in the nation, Empire Farm Days has expanded its dairy emphasis and direction to provide Northeast dairy producers with the newest products and advance technology. Northeast Dairy Business magazine and Empire Farm Days will be hosting a series of Dairy Profit Seminars focused on the latest in management and profitability strategies from those who know the business. Field demonstrations give manufacturers a chance to show farmers first-hand how their equipment responds to actual field conditions and farmers get a chance to talk directly with the company representatives about the equipment while kicking the tires and evaluating the results.

Farm health and safety associations come together at Empire Farm Days to provide farmers free health screenings and life-saving demos. Farm family programs offer daily programs designed to help farm families meet today's farm lifestyles challenges.

This three-day show is famous for its beef, pork, and chicken barbecues as well as its short order food booths offering a quick drink, hot dog, hamburger, hot sausage, and other snacks.

Seneca County continues to be an area filled with beauty and economic opportunities. Agriculture is by far the most important economic sector in the county, contributing a value production in excess of $35 million. It reflects the diversity of Northeast agriculture with the production of milk, field crops, fruits, vegetables, grapes, horses, poultry, eggs and meat animals.

The Finger Lakes area holds a mystery all its own with scenic lakes, state parks, historic sites, wine trails, restaurants, and a hospitality as warm as its summer days.

Visitors are invited to plan their vacation around Empire Farm Days and spend some time enjoying the area.

Rodman Lott and Son Farm Host 1999 Empire Farm Days

One of the biggest assets Seneca County and the Northeast agricultural community has is the Lott family and its business. Ralph Lott, his wife Shirley, and their children Nicole, Rodman, and Benjamin are the owners and operators of the Rodman Lott & Son Farm. Continuing with the tradition started by his parents, Ralph and Shirley became sole operators upon Rodman's "retirement" a few years ago.

However, both Rodman and his wife Ellen are still active and involved in the farm operation.

The family history of farming began when Rodman and Ellen Lott set up a crop operation in Pennsylvania from 1954-1968. In 1960 they also operated a 400-acre soybean operation in Delaware. In 1968 they moved to the panhandle of Florida and raised peanuts, beef cattle, and pigs. Twelve years later the Lotts found themselves settled in Seneca Falls.

Rodman and Ellen have four grown children—Ralph, Ginny, Mark and Lisie.

As far back as 1931 there has been an agricultural show sponsored by the Empire State Potato Growers, Inc. which was hosted by New York State farmers and was committed to bringing to farmers in the Northeast the newest techniques and equipment available to agriculture.

Since then, this annual event has undergone many changes, including name, location and size, but its sponsor and purpose have remained constant. It brings the farmer and agribusiness communities together all in one place, all at one time, at a high quality agricultural trade show. Today Empire Farm Days has grown to be the largest outdoor three-day trade show in the Northeast, with more than 600 exhibitors.

The event originated as Potato Field Days in 1931. In 1964 the show was called the Potato Field Day and Farm Materials Exhibition and was hosted by Humphreys Farm, Hartford; 1965. The event in 1965 was co-hosted by McCormick Farms and William Gozelski, Gainsville.

The 1966 co-hosts were Russell Mathews and Monroe County Department of Parks, Mendon.

In 1967 the show had grown to such a magnitude that another name change was required to reflect the scope of the event.

WALINGA SILO-FILLER

The Silo-Filler has been designed to give the user maximum capacity, flexibility and product control. It does not actually "Throw" the product, but blows it gently, using a cushion of air. With the Walinga Silo-Filler, you simply dump from your truck or trailer directly into the hopper, and the transfer auger moves the product up and into the Drop-Thru / Blow-Thru Airlock. The blower then moves the product up the silo pipes. Ideal for blowing high moisture corn into silos, the Silo-Filler is compact, and can easily be moved from one location to another.

The Importance of Agricultural Education

Brendon (Brent) Landis
Ag Services Coordinator

As we begin to evaluate how we can improve our current agriculture industry and the many misperceptions people have within agriculture, it is evident that it begins with the proper education. People in the past have had a closer tie to agriculture through either growing up on a farm or at one time working on one. In today's culture, very few people actually have any contact with farming. As agriculture continues to be Pennsylvania's number one industry, the need for quality employees with an education in agriculture continues to increase. To help overcome some of these current problems and help ensure a future in agriculture education, the PA Department of Education has initiated a statewide project called the "Vision for Pennsylvania Agricultural Education."

During the past three years, more than 500 people have been involved with a national and state initiative to develop a vision for Pennsylvania agricultural education. The resulting vision statement for this project is "Educating people for life through agriculture; food, fiber and natural resource systems." The Secretary of Agriculture, Samuel Hayes, and the Secretary of Education, Eugene Hickok, are both supporting this project and its goals. The project results will help serve as a guide for local schools, in developing agricultural education programs for anyone from kindergartners to adults.

Two major components in this program are agriculture awareness and workforce development. Mimi Lufkin, the project director, is working in cooperation with Pennsylvania State University, the Pennsylvania Department of Education, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and the Pennsylvania Association of Agriculture Education. Currently, the project is working at identifying industry validated workforce development standards to help produce a sustainable agriculture workforce.

Many different agricultural businesses and organizations from across the industry had the opportunity on July 15 to take part in a validation process for these new standards and benchmarks. Luke Brubaker, a member of Pennsylvania's Milk Marketing Board and owner of Brubaker Farms in Mt. Joy helped to identify some of the most relevant issues that this project needs to accomplish.

Brubaker said in relation to the importance of this program, "In the past, our community's all have had relatives that were raised on farms. We are getting further and further away from the farm with each new generation. If we do not emphasis the importance of agriculture in education and better prepare our students, they are not going to realize how viable this industry really is. With 20 percent of our state's workforce currently in agriculture, there is a great opportunity out there for students."

Another participant in the validation process was Jerry Phillips, a senior loan officer at Keystone Farm Credit, ACA. Mr. Phillip's comments were, "It is very obvious that the agriculture curriculum has become very dynamic and encompasses much more than just 'milking the cows and planting corn.' As agriculture continues to be a leading employer and revenue generator in Lancaster County and PA, this project is intent on keeping the new and future work-force as best prepared as possible to meet the needs of tomorrow's agriculture." The goals of this program include areas in agriculture for personal development, professional development, lifelong learning, environmental stewardship, long-term ag viability, and emerging technologies.

The next step following this validation process is to publish a handbook that will include all of the new standards and benchmarks. The handbooks will be distributed first to all schools with existing agricultural programs. Following that, they will go to schools that do not have any current agricultural education in hopes of implementing programs. The overall goal for this project is to better prepare our students for the agricultural workforce in the 21st Century.

This program is created to work with not only the ag teachers, but the principals, guidance counselors, and all the teachers, in hope of getting the entire school administration up to speed on the importance of agriculture. By integrating agricultural education throughout the school curriculum, we can better prepare a society that has the exposure and knowledge of our food and fiber industry and the important role it plays in our lives.

If you have any questions or comments about the project, "Vision for Pennsylvania Agricultural Education," please contact either Mimi Lufkin, project director, at (717) 529-6635 or Tim Weller, agriculture education advisor, at (717) 772-4968.

For your calendar: The 23rd Annual Agriculture-Industry Banquet is on November 23, 1999. For more information please call Brent Landis at (717) 397-3531, ext. 62 or e-mail at blandis@lcci.com.

Golden Milk Sale Oct. 16

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairylea Cooperative — and its livestock marketing subsidiary, Empire Livestock Marketing, LLC, — are teaming up to market 100 animals that have high protein or solids in their genetics.

Called the Golden Milk Sale, this unique event is to take place on Saturday, Oct. 16 at Empire Livestock's market in Dryden, N.Y.

With multiple component pricing provisions included in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Final Rule of Federal Order Reform, components in milk will have a stronger impact on the price farmers are paid for their milk.

Several New York breed associations are making plans to participate in the sale, including the New York Holstein Association, the New York Jersey Club, the New York Brown Swiss Association and the New York Ayrshire Club. All associations have agreed to provide top-quality animals for this first-of-its-kind event.

"This will be different from any other sale before," said Dale Chambers, general manager of Empire Livestock Marketing, LLC.

"It is exciting to see the different breed associations coming together to promote the importance of high protein and solids genetics in the dairy cow of the future."

Anyone interested in consigning animals to the sale is encouraged to contact their breed association or call Lowell Smith at Dairylea at 1-800-654-8838, ext. 671.

Dairylea Cooperative Inc. is a Syracuse-based agricultural service organization cooperatively owned by more than 2,600 dairy farmers located throughout the Northeast.

Farm A Perennial Happiness Source For Piccolella Family

Judi and Frank Piccolella are flanked by Nortie, the official greeter, as they stand in front of their perennial beds and florist shop. The Piccolellas recently became members of both FTD and Teleflora in order to further expand their business.

Day Lilies are popular for their vibrant color in many perennial gardens.

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Tioga Co. Correspondent

LIBERTY (Tioga Co.) — "I'm a dreamer, but my dreams come true. Ever since I was a little girl, I wanted to be a florist," said Judi Piccolella as she walked through her ever expanding gardens.

Today she and her husband, Frank, operate Field Flowers Perennial Farm, and together man a florist and gift shop that is now in its second season. At the peak of the season, the Piccolellas estimate they had 10,000 pots of assorted perennials ready to sell.

Judi literally grew up working with flowers. Both her father and grandfather had florist shops in Mercer County, N.J.

"My father operated Joseph's Floral Gardens in Trenton. They were a full service florist, but they also had big glass houses where they grew cut flowers and they did the Easter plants and the Christmas poinsettias," said Judi.

About 21 years ago, Judi and Frank decided to escape the urban pressures of New Jersey and move to Pennsylvania with their son, Frank, who now helps them out occasionally when his full-time job allows.

The Piccolellas built the business slowly over the years. At first Judi focused on dried flowers and dried flower arrangements.

"I got into the dried flowers when I was in high school," noted Judi. "I would just pick wild things and dry them and sell them at little craft shows. After I got married I started my own business and I've been working on that for 26 years now."

Then, after buying a property with room to grow, she and her husband began propagating hardy perennials.

"The perennials I started doing when I moverd up here, because down in New Jersey, you could plant anything. Up here I would try to plant marigolds in April and have them frosted in June. It's a whole different climate. Here people were thinning gardens and gave me some perennials. Then I started reading intensely about them and I just started growing them and meeting other growers until it got to the point where we started growing quite a few plants. Plus we go involved with some large farms in the Bucks County area," said Judi.

For six to seven years after establishing their perennials, the Piccolellas grew the flowers in Tioga County and transported them to Bucks County, where they sold them.

"We were living up here and working down there, selling perennials in the Philadelphia area," said Judi. The perennials were sold at open air markets during the spring and summer. In the fall and throughout the winter, the Piccollellas switched gears to sell dried flowers and flower arrangements.

While working with the larger farms of southern Pennsylvania, the Piccolellas learned many propagation and growing tips. In return, they cued the larger growers in on the actual growing habits of the plants. "You know how seed catalogs are. They give you so much informatoin and say this is the perfect plant. We could say, this thing isn't hardy, or it really isn't blue, it's purple. They weren't gardeners, they were growers. They would go by the seed catalogs," Judi noted.

"We also could tell them what the plants would look like in the second and third years," said Frank.

Also, because they propagate many of their own plants from cuttings, seed or root divisions of their own stock, the quality of the plants is excellent.

"A lot of times when you buy started plants in, they've been neglected and you have to nurse them back to health. But if you start the process right from the beginning yourself, you get a better quality plant and a hardier plant too. The stock plants have been growing here for years and they're accustomed to the harsh winters and the wind," said Frank.

Three years ago, they decided to operate full time from their Pennsylvania home.

"Now I'm retired," laughed Judi who loves her morning commute across her yard to the floral shop and perennial gardens.

"We tested things out to see if we could make a go of it with just the perennials and finally decided to just stay up here," explained Judi.

"That's why we slowly developed the florist shop too, because that gives us a year-round income."

Added Frank, "We used to just sell the perennials and then after August or September, we'd have very little income until the following spring. We had to save up as much as we could. With the florist shop, there's income year-round." It's much more relaxed," said Judi.

"It's the way it should be. To live where we work has always been my dream and I think we appreciate it more since we did travel for so many years."

Even though the commute is shorter and the work enjoyable, it's not easy.

"Still it's a lot of work. We're up at 6 o'clock in the morning and work until dark, because there's always something that needs to be watered or cleaned. It's a lot of hours, but we enjoy it!" Judi exclaimed.

Flower growers also feel the stress of the season's drought conditions.

"This is the third season now (for drought conditions), and this is one of the worst. We devoted all this time to raising hardy perennials which really love cool temperatures and will tolerate them and now we're finding in May we're having temperatures in the 80s and it's really stressing these plants," she said.

Paler flowers and plants blooming ahead of schedule are just two signs that are readily apparent.

"I have plants that don't bloom until mid August in full bloom now. Things are actually six weeks ahead," said Judi. The dry seasons also affect their sales. People now plant perennials earlier in the spring and don't buy as many later in the season. They have also seen a heightened interest in shade loving plants.

"The Hostas and the other shade plants have really been selling much better in the past few years. Maybe people feel more secure putting in a shade garden where they don't have to water it quite as much for the shade plants to get established," noted Frank.

As their business continues to grow, they are now planning to put some of their perennials to use in a cut flower operation. The plan is to raise enough for themselves, but they also have a wholesaler lined up to take any extra flowers that they have to sell.

"We can't get them any fresher. I find I'm attracting customers

(Turn to Page B3)

Newly planted flowers require a lot of water in order to get established. Frank's job every morning is to water the flowers.

Perennial Happiness Source

who are sick and tired of just carnations and gladiolus. Everyone's into this garden thing and you see the real pretty bouquets in books. Unfortunately you can't find those kinds of flowers, but you can raise them."

Over the years the Piccolellas have enjoyed meeting new customers and are always learning new things.

"We find we have two kinds of customers. One is the avid gardener who will buy any plant at any time whether it's in bloom or not," explained Judi.

"Then we have the impulse buyer. The plant has to have a flower on it because they don't really know the plant by name, but if it has a flower on it that they like, they'll buy it," finished Frank.

The Piccolellas also learn new things from their customers and really enjoy seeing customers year after year.

"I learn from my customers a lot. We learn together. I get people in here in their 90s who have been gardening forever all the way to people who have never planted anything who buy these brand new homes with no trees or any landscaping and think it's all going to happen in six months."

Judi's best advice for all gardeners, especially beginners is to take it slow.

"Approach it slowly. What you see in magazines takes years. Start with a small garden that you yourself can maintain," said Judi. "Properly prepare it and set your plants. You'll be happier having one small bed that looks really good, than to have all these beds that are out of control. Then each year, expand."

Right now, Judi is following her own advice as she develops an extensive shade garden.

"One day I want this to be a walk through garden from the road up to the shop," she said.

Talent and trial and error drives Judi's love of flower arranging and gardening.

"I've had no formal training," admits Judi, "I go on what I learned from my parents and trial and error."

One of the biggest highlights in her flower career was becoming an FTD florist, a goal that she has always wanted to reach.

"Opening an FTD franchise in Liberty, to me, is like opening a McDonald's," she said.

Becoming an FTD florist is a process that doesn't happen overnight. First you have to submit an entry and they run a credit check. Then officials from the organization come out and inspect the shop.

"You have to have proper refrigeration, proper lighting, and the cooler has to have at least 10 to 12 different varieties of flowers in it at all times," explained Judi.

Before she was approved, an official paid an unexpected visit.

"They spent four hours here. I had to do a funeral piece and a little centerpiece. They wanted to see if I knew what I was doing," said Judi.

After the inspection, she had to submit photos of the shop and the operation had to be approved by two different boards.

"It took me a year and a half to get this," said Judi. "I'm actually third generation FTD. That's why I did it."

She also decided to become a Teleflora Florist after finding some things with FTD that she's not happy with.

"Now I'm finding that most of the florists who are FTD are also Teleflora," she said.

For now, the Piccolellas will keep both services in order to service clients throughout the area. They will also continue to work with their perennials and develop their cut flower operation. "It's my dream come true," concluded Judi.

Students Invent Device To Test Watermelon Ripeness

NEWARK, Del. — Four mechanical engineering students from the University of Delaware have developed an ingenious device to test for watermelon ripeness.

Green watermelons — a serious economic threat to growers and a disappointment for consumers — are automatically rejected by this new machine.

The prototype takes into consideration what one needs to test for ripeness the old-fashioned way: a hand to thump on the melon and an ear to listen for the telltale, hollow sound.

Only this machine uses a mallet as a metal arm to rap the melon. A microphone picks up the sound and transfers it via electric signal to a laptop computer, which analyses the acoustic signal.

On watermelons tested so far, that frequency of the echo appears to correlate closely with how ripe it is. The prototype reports a ripeness reading in 12 seconds. The machine weighs about 18 lbs. and costs less than $1,100 to build. The computer-controlled ripeness sensor ultimately could result in huge savings for the watermelon industry, according to William Watson, NWPB executive director, and Ed Kee, a UD extension specialist.

"Among our members, our research has shown that the number one thing that keeps popping up is that there needs to be a device to help anyone harvesting or buying a watermelon to determine ripeness," said Watson. "This invention can only help the whole watermelon industry."

Kee says watermelon growers need an automatic ripeness sensor because "it's not at all unusual for a 40,000-pound truckload of watermelons to be rejected at the marketplace. An entire load can be rejected if 10 melons are green."

The prototype isn't ready for the market just yet and inventors Matt Behr, Dave Bartoski, Allan Cohen and Jason Firko are working on testing their invention in the field.

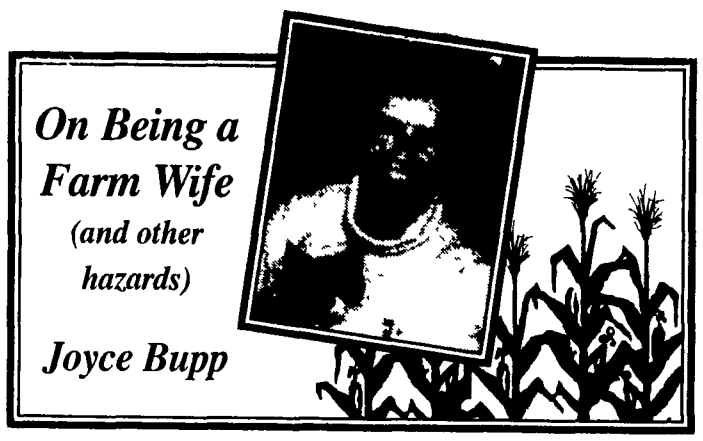
Agent for Goodville Mutual



The sound precedes the substance

A faint jingling. Is it the muffled ting-a-ling of a sno-cone truck making rounds through our neighborhood of rural homes? The whisper of delicate wind chimes? Maybe someone at the door rattling car keys in their pocket?

Then I remember. It's Derrah Dog

We lost our last family dog to old age more than two years ago. And while we have missed having a dog around, neither of us has had the time to devote to training and working with a puppy

Our preference for a dog is an older, more settled one, a dog past the chew-up-and-drag-around everything stage. One that has matured past yanking the sheets off the washline, shredding the rubber boots parked in the barn office, or decorating the driveways with trash before the garbage service claims it. Nor can we have a dog which runs the neighborhood, barks incessantly, or is threatening to our many visitors, walkers, and joggers.

None of the barn cats has cared that we lacked a canine resident. Occasional visits by our son's fluffy white Great Pyrnees gave them all the taste of dog they needed. Lapping up their milk. Snitching their cat food. Chasing them for the sport of it

Now, that's all changed. After returning home after their long residency in the West , our daughter's family brought not only our beloved grandchildren but also a "granddog" — Derrah Dog.

Derrah is a cream-colored Yellow Labrador Retriever, an 80-pound plus gentle giant. She spent her puppy years in the care of the family of one of our daughter's friends, who raised her as a 4-H Seeing Eye Dog project

In due time, Derrah attended guide-dog school and was teamed up with a vision-challenged new owner Before long, though, Derrah figured out that her human teammate could not see when she was being a less-than-well behaved dog. She also took up the unfortunate hobby of chasing squirrels.

Need I say more? So Derrah re-entered the "civilian" canine world to a new career assignment Family pet. She promptly rose to that challenge, providing affectionate companionship to two little boys who happily share with her their time, their toys and their snacks. They can hug her, play around her, crawl over her and curl up for a nap with her. The most threatening thing she might do is get up and move aside.

But her early training is deeply etched and Derrah obeys better than many children do – except occasionally when food might be involved She lives to eat, preferably "people" food when she can wrangle it. That actually comes in very handy after meals involving a 4-year-old and a 2-year-old Derrah is the prototype of a self-powered, four-legged vacuum cleaner. Highly effective, too

Her training also serves her well in that she sticks very close to her human charges. So close that you fall over her if you don't pay attention.

But Derrah now has a new career challenge – that of farm dog. And she has risen ably to the occasion.

She helps herself to the barn cats' chow and regularly tangles with Monk, our fiercely-territorial housecat. She runs with the four-wheeler to haul in new calves, readily rolls in cool, muddy patches in pasture corners and takes great pleasure in terrorizing mice and rats – with no clue what to do with them after she snags one. Showing her Retriever instincts, Derrah adores the pond and plunges in at every opportunity during this blistering hot summer, much to our envy. Oh, and she still chases squirrels.

With the Dog Days of August upon us, we can likely anticipate a few more weeks of the season's already-way-overdone heat, haze, humidity, and haunting lack of rain. But the sound of a cricket in the basement foretells that Dog Days will soon pass, ushering in more comfortable days.

And at the back door, a soft, jingly sound – I.D. tags on a dog collar – can be heard. A squirrel just made a wild dash from the bird feeder to a tree. Monk's fluffed her black-and-white hair to double size in aggravated anticipation.

Another Derrah Dog Day is just beginning.

Pay It Again, Sam

In the movie Casablance, there is the famous line — that movie buffs will know that Humphrey Bogart never actually said — "Play it again, Sam." With regard to many spending habits, this line easily could be restated as "Pay it again, Sam."

Recently I broke down and bought an answering machine. Even though I don't particularly like answering machines, I thought it might help me catch a few important calls I may have been missing and to screen the nuisance telemarketing calls. After I made my selection, the sales person asked if I was also interested in a cellular phone. I responded that I thought they were too expensive. He pointed out that some models were on sale for a very good price. But it's still $100 a phone call, I told him. He looked puzzled so I explained that the $25 a month service charge adds up to $300 per year. Since I estimated that there were only about three times a year that I might need, not want, to make a call, the cost was $100 per call. I think that's too expensive. Being a good sales person, he continued trying to make the sale by telling me that I would be surprised how many times I would use it if I had one. While I realize that there are many people who have much more use for a cellular phone than I do, it seemed a good example of how often people consider only the one time cost for merchandise and not the total costs of items that include an ongoing expense.

Repetitive expenses that you pay again and again, even if small, can quickly add up and are easy to overlook. For example, a soda from the machine in the building where I work is only 50 cents. That isn't very much if I buy one soda. But if I buy a soda every day at work, that adds up to over $120 a year. Similarly, a pack-a-day smoker paying three dollars a pack will spend nearly $1,100 per year — money that literally goes up in smoke.

We also may be tempted to buy other things such as a couple of the extra telephone services, the cable TV premium channels, or a small loan with a payment of "just $40 per month." Although the $40 per month may not seem like much, when you pay it again and again it adds up to $480 per year.

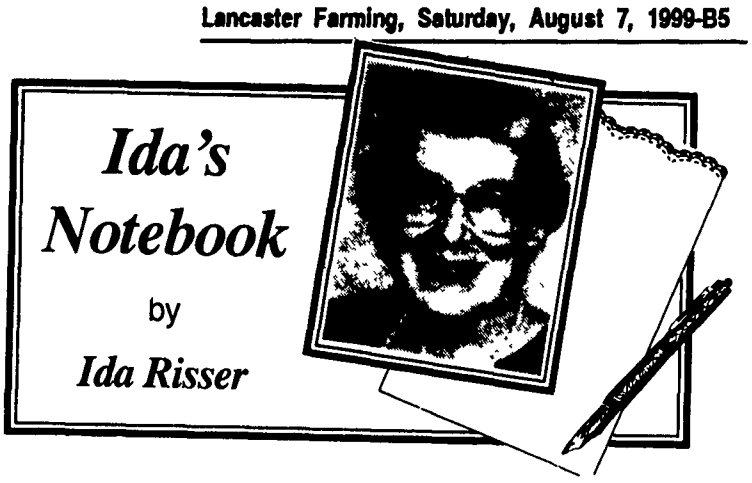
These payments don't amount to much when done only once. But if you are not careful, their repetitive nature can turn a harmless expenditure into a budget buster. If you have the extra money, there is no problem. But if money is tight and you are looking for a place to reduce expenses, don't look only at the big ticket items. Take a careful look at the small ones that you are paying again and again. You may be able to save a lot of money by giving up a few of these repetitive expenses.

What can you do to find out what these expenses are? Because this is money that easily slips through the fingers, you will want to keep an accurate record of where all the money is going for at least a month. Even though it is only a small amount at a time, many people have no idea how often or how much they spend for these items.

There are seveal approaches to saving money. It may not be necessary to give up the soda entirely to save money. For example, I could look for a cheaper source for the soda. If I purchased it at a grocery store and brought it to work, I might save about $60 a year. Another alternative is to drink less by getting along with a soda only every other day. This could also save about $60 a year. For even greater savings, I could drink water instead, saving the full $120 a year. I could also use some combination of a cheaper source along with consuming less.

Even if money is not tight, by cutting out or reducing some of these expenditures, you can use the money you save for something you would enjoy even more. Maybe you could finance a vacation, save for retirement, or buy a new or better car.

Before committing to paying that "low monthly fee of only $40," stop a moment and think about the long-term costs. If money is tight, could it be put to better use somewhere else? Do you really want to keep paying it again and again?



We've had no significant rain for two months. I had sparingly watered some garden with a hose until the drought emergency stopped that. It is difficult to see the plants die. There is a small maple tree that we bought last year to replace a large one that was dead on one side. When its leaves began to curl, I began to carry dishpans of water to it. If only I can keep plants alive until it rains.

Some azalea bushes have died as they are planted very close to two trees. My two small burning bushes actually look better than last year. One thing in the garden that does not seem to mind this very dry period is my row of peanuts. Their yellow blossoms will become peanuts under the soil in the fall. Our cats live in my flower beds and kill some of the iris and dahlias. We moved some to our nearby farm, but they found their way back again.

My husband likes to visit his brothers who live in other counties. And, despite my best efforts, he seems to manage to arrive at their homes at mealtime. They are the cooks in the family and urge us to stay for a meal. Seldom do we get a chance to repay their generosity.

Our church has been having lemonade concerts every week this summer. We attended the one that featured piano music. There are some that include songs from Italy and Ireland while others are barbershop harmonizers. Of course, there is lemonade waiting for us after each performance.

Sometimes it is nice to get away from the work at home. So, we occasionally go out for lunch or visit friends. The work is always waiting when we come home.

Pickling Possibilities

Pickling was discovered as a means of preservation by the Babylonians more than 4,500 years ago. Pickling is a great way to preserve nutrition and summertime flavor.

People mostly think of pickles being pickled, but the types of food that can be pickled run the gamut from pigs feet to watermelon rind.

Here are some pickling tips from Heinz, makers of a variety of vinegar.

• For best flavor and texture, pickle fruits and vegetables within 24 hours after picking from the garden. Garden produce is at its peak if you pick above-ground plants early in the morning and root crops the evening before.

• Select slightly underripe fruits for better shape and texture retention after pickling.

• Pickling perfection begins and ends with the key ingredient — vinegar. Be sure to select only the highest quality, distilled white or cider vinegar of 5 percent acidity.

• Use pure granulated pickling salt. The iodine and additives in table salt may make the pickling liquid cloudy or cause discoloration.

Try these creative pickling recipes.

END OF THE GARDEN PICKLES

6 cups distilled white vinegar
4 cups granulated sugar
1½ cups water
3 tablespoons mixed pickling spice
2 tablespoons pickling salt
3 cups broccoli flowerets
3 cups cauliflower flowerets
3 cups carrot pieces
3 cups cubed unpeeled cucumber
3 cups zucchini chunks
2 cups red or green bell pepper squares
2 medium onions, cut into 8 wedges

In an 8- to 10-quart saucepot, combine vinegar, sugar, pickling spice, and salt. Bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. Boil 4 minutes. Add vegetables, reduce heat and simmer until vegetables are hot, about 5 minutes. Immediately fill hot quart jars with mixture, leaving ½ -inch headspace. Carefully run a nonmetallic utensil down inside of jars to remove trapped air bubbles. Wipe jar tops and threads clean. Place hot lids on jars and screw bands on firmly. Process in boiling water canner for 15 minutes. Makes about 3 to 4 quarts.

Heinz

PICKLED WATERMELON RIND

5 pounds watermelon rind
1 lemon, thinly sliced, seeded
2 tablespoons whole allspice
2 tablespoons chopped fresh ginger root
4 3-inch sticks cinnamon, broken
4 cups granulated sugar
2 cups distilled white vinegar
1 cup water

Remove all pink flresh and dark green rind from watermelon rind. Cut into 1-inch squares or diamond shapes. Measure rind to equal 10 cups. Blanch rind in boiling water for 8 to 10 minutes or just until a fork can slightly pierce the rind. Do not overcook. Cool in ice water. Drain well. Place rind and lemon slices in a 6 to 8-quart nonmetallic container. Tie allspice, ginger root, and cinnamon in spice bag. In a 6 to 8-quart saucepot, combine sugar, vinegar, water, and spice bag. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes. Pour syrup over watermelon and lemon; stir. Cover and let stand in cool place for 12 to 18 hours, stirring 2 or 3 times. Remove lemon. In 6- to 8-quart saucepan, bring mixture to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 40 to 50 minutes or until rind is transparent, stirring occasionally. Remove spice bag. Immediately fill hot pint or half-pint jars with mixture, leaving ½ -inch headspace. Carefully run a nonmetallic utensil down inside of jars to remove trapped air bubbles. Wipe jar tops and threads clean. Place hot lids on jars and screw bands on firmly. Process in boiling water canner 15 minutes for pints and 10 minutes for half-pints. Makes 3 to 4 pints or 6 to 8 half-pints.

VINEGARED RED ONIONS

3 pounds red onions
4 cups white wine vinegar
1 clove garlic, crushed

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions.

Peel onions. Slice onions ¼ -inch thick; separate slices into rings. Bring vinegar and garlic to a boil; reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes. Add onions rings to vinegar mixture. Simmer, covered, about 5 minutes. Discard garlic. Pack onions into hot jars, leaving ¼ -inch headspace. Ladle hot pickling liquid over onions, ¼ -inch headspace. Remove air bubbles. Wipe rim and threads of jars with a clean damp cloth. Place lid on jar with sealing compound next to glass. Screw band down evenly and firmly. Do not use excessive force. Process 10 minutes in boiling water canner. Yields: about 5 half pints.

(Turn to Page B8)

Essential to the success of pickling recipes are quality vinegars. Both distilled white and apple cider vinegars should have the five percent acidity level recommended for food preservation. Always use pure granulated pickling salt. The iodine and additives in table salt may make the pickling liquid cloudy or cause discoloration.

STEP-BY-STEP TIPS FOR PICKLING

1 Assemble all equipment and utensils Make sure everything is clean and in good, working condition

2 Visually examine jars for nicks and cracks Examine lids for scratches and defects Check bands for proper fit Wash jars and two piece caps in hot, soapy water Rinse well Dry bands, set aside Put jars and lids in a saucepot filled with water, bring water to a simmer (180° F) DO NOT BOIL LIDS Remove saucepot from heat Allow jars and lids to remain in hot water until needed

3 Select top quality produce Wash thoroughly before preparing recipe

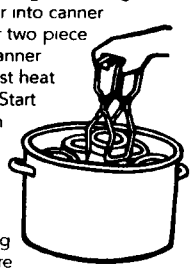
4 Prepare only one recipe at a time Follow recipe instructions

5 Pack pickles into hot jars and cover with hot pickling liquid Leave the recommended headspace

6 Remove air bubbles with a nonmetallic spatula

7 Wipe top and threads of jars with a clean damp cloth Adjust two piece caps

8 Place each jar as it is filled onto elevated rack over canner containing simmering water When rack is filled, lower into canner and add boiling water to cover two piece caps by 1 to 2 inches Cover canner and bring water to a boil Adjust heat to hold water at a steady boil Start counting processing time when water reaches a rolling boil



9 When processing fermented cucumbers and fresh pack dills, start counting the processing as soon as jars are lowered into boiling water Start counting the processing time after water returns to a rolling boil for all other fresh pack pickles Adjust heat to hold water at a steady boil If during processing time water should boil away and the two piece caps become exposed, add boiling water to cover two piece caps by 1 to 2 inches

10 When processing time is complete, remove jars from canner Stand jars upright on a towel out of drafts Allow 1 to 2 inches of space between jars

11 After 12 to 24 hours test seals and remove bands

12 Wash outside of jar and lid surface Label Store sealed jars in a cool dry dark place

Common Pickle Problems

SOFT
- Use of slicing rather than pickling cucumbers.

ANSWER — Shirley Ream, Criston, Ohio, wanted a recipe on how to can ring bologna. Thanks to a Geneva, N.Y. reader, for sending a recipe.

Balogna To Make And Can

For each 20 pounds beef, add 5 pounds fresh pork. Grind meat coarse; add seasoning and grind through the fine plate.

For seasoning 25 pounds meat, add ½ pound salt and 2½ -ounces pepper. Garlic may be added if desired.

Add 3 or 4 pints water to this quantity of meat. Mix with hands until the water is entirely absorbed by the meat. When thoroughly mixed, stuff into soaked casings and smoke the bologna from 2 to 3 hours at a temperature between 60-70 degrees.

After smoking, cook in water about 200 degrees or slightly below boiling point, until it floats.

Keep bologna in a dry place. For immediate use or to can by packing into jars, covering to within ½ -inch of top with the liquid in which bologna was cooked. Process at 15 pounds pressure for 45 minutes.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — M. Hoover, New Holland, wanted a recipe to make sour cream. Thanks to a New York reader for sending the following instructions.

Home-Cultured Sour Cream

1 pint light cream
⅛ cup commercial buttermilk

Pour half of cream into a pint-sized jar. Add buttermilk (homemade buttermilk may not start the culture). Cover and shake vigorously to blend. Stir in remaining cream, blending well, then cover the jar and let stand for 16-24 hours at room temperature between 72-82 degrees. When thickened, refrigerate for 48 hours before using.

You can keep the culture going a few more times: When only 1 cup sour cream remains in the jar, stir in 1 cup light cream; blend thoroughly; cover jar and let stand 16-24 hours as before.

ANSWER — Joan Yarnall, Gilbertsville, wanted to know where to find dried codfish sold in a box. Thanks to a reader who writes although the dried codfish is no longer sold in a box, it can be purchased in individual pieces at some supermarkets. To make, cover the piece with cold water and soak 3 to 8 hours, depending on how salty. Salt content depends on the source so there is a big variation. One pound is needed for about 6 servings. Here is a recipe the reader enjoys.

Codfish Patties

Soak codfish, drain and shred. Add 3 cups sliced potatoes and cover with boiling water. Boil about 30 minutes or until fish and potatoes are very tender. Drain and mash.

Add 2 tablespoons butter, 2 eggs, slightly beaten, ¼ cup milk, ¼ teaspoon pepper, and dash nutmeg. Beat until light and fluffy. Chill. Shape into patties. Fry in small amount of fat until browned.

ANSWER — M. Hoover, New Holland, wanted recipes for homemade cake mixes. Thanks to a Geneva, N.Y. reader for sending the following:

Yellow Cake Mix

1⅔ cup cake flour (make by putting 2 tablespoons corn starch in 1 cup measure. Fill cup with flour, sift 3 times)
2½ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1¼ cup sugar
½ cup vegetable shortening

Sift together flour, baking powder, and salt. Stir to blend. Resift with sugar. Cut shortening into dry ingredients until the mixture is crumbly. Label and store in a sealed bag at room temperature.

To use: Pour one package of mixture into mixing bowl. Add ¾ cup milk and 1¼ teaspoon vanilla. Beat at slow to medium speed for 2 minutes or 135 strokes per minute for 3 minutes by hand. Scrape sides frequently. Add 2 eggs, beat one minute more (2 minutes by hand).

Bake in two 8- or 9-inch cake pans at 375 degrees for 25 minutes or 9x13x2-inch pan for 30-35 minutes.

White cake: Follow directions for yellow cake, replacing 2 eggs with 3 unbeaten egg whites. Use electric mixer for beating.

Spice Cake: Add to package of yellow cake mix: ¼ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves, and a pinch of ground allspice. Follow yellow cake directions.

Extract-Flavored Cakes: Replace vanilla in either the yellow or whte cake recipes with 2 to 3 teaspoons extract of your choice. You may want to add a few drops of suitable food coloring for flavors such as lemon, orange, or cherry.

ANSWER — A busy mom wanted soup recipes to can. Thanks to a Geneva, N.Y. reader for sending this one.

Tomato Soup

40 cups tomato juice
3 cups flour
½ cup salt
4 cups sugar
3 sticks, butter, softened
2 tablespoons onion salt

Combine flour, sugar, salt, butter, and enough juice to make a paste. Add to tomato juice. Stir in onion salt. Cook a little and put into jars. Process 30 minutes in boiling water bath.

To serve, mix half soup with half milk.

ANSWER — N.E.K. wanted a recipe for a cake icing (not the cooked kind) that isn't so sweet. Thanks to a reader who sent in a frosting recipe that she uses on all her cakes, cookies, and cupcakes. Exact amounts are not specified and we are hesitate to print it, but for those who want to experiment, it doesn't sound too difficult.

Melt some butter but do not brown it, add 1 cup milk and powdered sugar until it is the right consistency for spreading. You'll need to experiment with the butter and sugar amount. The trick is to make it so it isn't so sweet by replacing some of the powdered sugar with flour. If you want fluffy frosting, use buttermilk instead of regular milk.

Thanks to L. Staner, Red Lion, for sending a recipe that is used on a Madarin Orange Cake and for sending a cooked frosting recipe.

Frosting

1 small can crushed pineapple with juice
1 small box instant vanilla pudding
8-ounce container whipped topping

Blend ingredients together and frost cake that is cooled.

Mock Whipped Cream Frosting

½ cup milk
¼ cup butter
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
¼ cup shortening
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cook milk and flour in small pan over low heat until thick. Cool. Blend butter and shortening with mixer. Add sugar gradually and mix for another 4 minutes, add cooked milk paste. Mix for 2-4 minutes. Fold in vanilla. Cake should be kept refrigerated.

Farm Safety Day Camp Draws 110 Children

BEAVER SPRINGS (Snyder Co.) — According to the West Snyder FFA Chapter, 110 community children recently learned how to identify and deal with hazards on the farm. Held at the Beaver Community Fairgrounds in Beaver Springs, West Snyder FFA Chapter's Progressive Farmer Farm Safety Day Camp drew children between the ages of 3 to 12 from throughout the community for a day-long event. Children learned how to take responsibility for their own safety, respect parents' safety rules, and share safety tips with their family and friends, said Cynthia Shaffer, West Snyder FFA adviser and coordinator of the event.

Hands-on experiences led by members of the West Snyder FFA Chapter taught camp participants lifetime farm safety lessons. Shaffer said that she hopes that by sharing and applying the lessons learned at camp, participants will help reduce the number of rural children who die or are injured in farm accidents.

The Progressive Farmer Farm Safety Day Camp was sponsored nationally by Shell Lubricants, Farm Plan, Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., Dupont Agricultural Products, Cargill, Inc., Agco, Asgrow Seed Company, Lowe's Home Improvement Warehouse, Zeneca Ag Products, and Progressive Farmer Magazine.

Throughout the day, the 110 camp participants rotated through 10 safety stations. Each group of approximately 11 campers was led to the stations by members of the West Snyder Jr. High FFA Chapter, Sr. High FFA Chapter, and the Middleburg Boy Scouts. The West Snyder Senior High FFA members conducted the safety presentations along with some community volunteers.

At the Basic First Aid station, FFA member Carolyn Howard with the assistance of Deb Woodling and Jenny Fitzgerald, registered nurses, explained how to bandage a wound. Each camp participant who assembled their own first aid kit.

At the Chemical Safety station, FFA member Jodi Fetterolf explained the similarities between household chemicals and certain food and candy products.

At the Gun Safety station, FFA member Heather Hollenbach with the assistance of the PA State Police and the National Rifle Association "Eddie Eagle" curriculum taught the campers to "don't touch and leave the area" when they see a gun.

Campers made their own ear plug key chain at the Personal Protective Devices station.

FFA members Todd Esbenshade and Shane Eia also demonstrated the value of wearing safety glasses, steel-toed shoes, and a hard hat. Each camp participant had their picture taken with a digital camera and their own "bike license" printed at the bike safety station by FFA member James Wright. While James was operating the computer, FFA member Michele Fetterolf explained how to correctly wear a bike helmet.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Troup of Beaver Springs conducted the ATV and lawn mower safety station. The participants were able to view the safe and unsafe parts of the equipment. FFA members Brad Rheam and Chuck Kessler demonstrated water safety. Each camper tried on a life vest as they learned the importance of wearing one at all times while boating.

At the animal safety station, FFA members Kate Heeter and Melissa McWilliams explained how and when to safely approach an animal. Each participant practiced their skills with live cows. Erik Markley of the Beaver Springs Fire Company volunteered to give the participants a "tour" of the fire truck. He also explained the equipment that a fireman uses to fight the fires.

FFA member Sandy Opdyke and Jennifer Balatincz explained the importance of having an escape route and using smoke alarms. Each participant received their own smoke alarm.

At the farm equipment safety station, FFA members Brandon Herman and Luke Zerby explained how difficult it is to see small children while operating a tractor. Participants were able to climb up on a tractor and try to locate others around the equipment.

West Snyder FFA members said the day camp's success is due in large part to the generous support of many local organizations and volunteers.

Todd Esbenshade, West Snyder FFA member, demonstrates the importance of using hard hats and other personal protective equipment.

Why do people worry about tick bites?
Tick bites can make people really sick, if the tick was carrying a disease
Ticks are tiny arachnids that live by feeding on the blood of animals They go through three different stages Tiny larvae feed on rodents such as mice for several days, then drop off the host. After about a week, the larvae cast off their skins to become nymphs (Scientists call this process molting) Nymphs feed again, drop to the ground, and molt into mature adult ticks
Adult ticks prefer to feed on larger animals, such as dogs, deer and humans A male feeds for a few days, mates with a female, then continues to feed A female feeds for a week to 10 days Then she drops to the ground, lays several thousand eggs and dies
The potential problem for humans starts back at the larvae stage Say a tick larva fed on a mouse infected with the bacteria that causes Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever or Lyme disease The adult tick still carries that infection and can transfer it to a person, if the tick stays attached to the skin long enough
But don't let worry keep you from going into the woods or near grassy areas where ticks live Just take proper precautions, such as wearing long-sleeved shirts and long pants tucked into socks and checking your pets and yourself for ticks when you leave If you get bit, remove the tick immediately by pulling it out slowly with tweezers, and pay close attention for signs of illness If caught early, tick-transmitted diseases are easily treated!

Summer Intern

August 3, 1999 — a day I will never forget, a day that will live in infamy.

It was Aug. 3 that began the week of the 1999 Lancaster County 4-H Fair. A week that was full of thrills, surprises, and blue ribbons. This is the week that pushed me to my limit as Lancaster's 4-H summer assistant, testing me every step of the way.

The 4-H Fair was the event that I had been planning for all summer. I did not go in unprepared, for I had hours of training from the best of coaches and even some help from friendly office supplies.

Held at the Lampeter Fairground, the 4-H Fair started with project check-in on Tuesday, Aug. 3 and ended with the final teardown on Saturday, Aug. 7.

I can only describe what went on during that week as a combination of complete exhaustion and absolute fun. As you know, the 4-H Fair is the culmination of my job as summer assistant. Everything I have done so far this summer was leading up to this one week. This was a week that provided me with tons of work and memories that will last a lifetime.

Of course before the fair could even begin, millions of things had to be done - but planning for the fair is not something that can be done by just one person. It takes the whole 4-H staff working as a team to ensure that an event of this magnitude comes together and runs smoothly. Preparations for the 1999 4-H Fair began one week after the completion of the 1998 fair.

Katina Showman is the coordinator of the event, and as her assistant I am given many jobs, including phone solicitor. It was my responsibility to contact and locate the many judges and other helpers who keep the fair running.

During the weeks that lead up to the fair, my best friend in the office was none other than my desk telephone! The phone and I shared a special relation-

Lancaster 4-H Excels In State Competition

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster County 4-H'ers returned tired but ecstatic after three days of intense competition during the annual 4-H State Days, University Park, last week.

"It's the first time we won both meats and livestock competitions in the same year," said Chet Hughes, livestock extension agent.

Katina Showman, extension 4-H agent, said that she believes Lancaster County 4-H members won more top awards than in any previous years, and that Lancaster had more winners than any other county. More than 1,100 4-H'ers competed in competition during the three-day event.

In addition to senior teams in livestock judging and in meats judging sweeping the state titles, the junior horse judging team also placed first.

The county also had the highest individual scoring with Mila Pilz winning female archery; Jimmy Mullen, male physical fitness; Kevin Pfautz, first individual in livestock judging; Johnathan Henson, first in junior horse judging; and Ryan Donough, first in senior meats judging.

Second and third placing individuals also peppered the winning scoring.

Despite this outstanding achievement, members of the livestock and meats judging team won't have long to regale in victory. Both teams need to study hard to compete at national competition in November. Livestock members, Jessica Schmidt, Kevin Pfautz, Geoffrey Rohrer, and John Hess will compete in Louisville. Meat judging team members Radell Peters, Jimmy Zimmerman, Derick Bollinger, and Ryan Donough will compete at Kansas City.

"Winning means more work and intense practice," Hughes said.

Showman countered, "But it's pretty special to have so many winning teams."

(Turn to Page B14)

First in the state in 4-H female archery competition is Mila Pilz. Jimmy Mullen swept 4-H male physical fitness competition to place first in the state. Both are members of Lancaster County 4-H.

ship in which I was constantly begging it to help me find that one person who kew how to judge the 4-H project of decoupage or woodworking.

This year's 4-H fair featured more than 30 different 4-H projects. Each was different in its own way, and yes, each of them needed to be judged. That was where I, and my trusty ivory colored phone, came in. Day after day we would sit together calling possible judges and imploring them to come judge at the 4-H Fair. I must point out that, for the most part, many of the people I called said "yes" without giving it a second thought.

But as with every project, I encountered some pretty interesting facts that were unearthed along the way. For instance, I discovered that the first week in August just happens to be the most popular time to take a vacation during the summer. It also seemed to be the most popular time to plan picnics and other summer events. OK, so I realized that people take vacations all summer, and picnics happen all the time, but it did kind of sound like something off of "Unexplained Mysteries."

As I sit here at my desk exhausted and still trying to recover from the past week, I realize that no amount of training I could receive would have totally prepared me for the full force of the 4-H Fair. I'd like to tell you more about my adventures but I think I need to get a little sleep. Wake me up in one week!

Meet 'Corny' Award-Winning Author At Cherry-Crest Farm's Amazing Maize Maze Aug. 12-14

RONKS (Lancaster Co.) — Award-winning author Betty Fussell will return to the U.S. from the World Gourmet Summit in Singapore, just in time to make a special guest appearance Aug. 12-14 at the Cherry-Crest Farm's Amazing Maize Maze in Lancaster county. What better place to promote her book "The Story of Corn," written in 1992 and re-released last-month in paperback, than a corn maze made up of more than 150,000 stalks.

Fussell will be available to sign books, and share her favorite corn tips as well as recipes, each day from 10 a.m. to noon, and 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Known for a long list of best-selling cookbooks – from "Crazy for Corn" that's completely dedicated to America's favorite grain, to her medley of culinary lore and recipes called "I Hear America Cooking." Fussell has sung praises to America's gastronomic breadth and diversity since she began writing cookbooks in the early 1980s.

But it is corn that brings Fussell to Lancaster County, and "The Story of Corn" a personal narrative—an epic—tells the extraordinary story of the grain that build the New World. As the "New York Times' stated: it's "a lively yet serious history, both fascinating and... fantastic... putting this book down is as hard as leaving an ear of fresh buttered corn half eaten." The book is a Julia Child Cookbook Award winner

"Wherever you touch corn, it takes you into every part of the food chain, into every segment of a menu around the world," she said of her fascination.

The gold Columbus discovered was corn and, after Columbus, corn went everywhere because it would grow everywhere. Corn became the poor man's staple from Beijing to Timbuktu, so it surfaces in recipes from Indonesia, Spain, India, Africa, Japan, as well as from Ecuador, Bolivia, Guatemala and Brazil."

Corn also takes us into America's past, into the highly sophisticated corn cuisine created by the royal dynasties of Maya, Aztec and Inca. As Fussell explains, "The banquets of Montezuma dazzled Cortes, and the inheritors of the cooking skills that produced them still dazzle visitors to Mexico with the quality and variety of their corn breads. North of the border we don't understand that corn traditions south of the border are directly connected to ours. Because their breads are called tortillas and tamales, we don't associate them with our spoon breads and Jonnycakes and muffins. We don't realize that we too are the inheritors of the ancient body of corn knowledge that was cradled in the middle of the Americas, and disseminated north and south."

Through the beginning of the 1900s, much of this inheritance was still intact. American farmers grew hundreds of varieties of corn in their fields and gardens. Today we basically think of three generic types - the sweet corn eaten on the cob, field corn used to feed animals, and popcorn. But as Fussell states, "There's a whole world of corn kinds that wait to be rediscovered in our own modern kitchens."

Fussell, who has demonstrated how to cook fresh corn at country fairs and city markets from coast to coast, said her favorite ways to eat fresh sweet corn is raw, right off the cob.

Sweet corns are classified by the percentage of sugar in their kernels ("sweet" has 5-10%, sugar-enhanced" has 15-18%, and "supersweet" 25-30%). Each season brings a new batch of supersweet varieties, with names like Kandy Korn, Peaches and Cream, Phenomenal, and Incredible.

"My hope is not to convert America to eating raw corn on the cob the way we eat sushi, but to remove any fear of using raw sweet corn in salads or purees, in vegetable mixes or pastas, or in a garish. Once you adjust to the idea that raw sweet corn is good - the way an apple, a raw carrot or a raw oyster is good - then cooking sweet corn as briefly as possible seems a reasonable idea. Heat speeds the conversion of sugar to starch, so the longer you cook sweet corn the tougher and starchier it becomes."

How does Fussell like to make corn on the cob? No salt in the boiling water because it toughens the kernels' skins. No sugar, because with supersweets it's really overdoing it. And leave the husks on, because the green inner husks intensify the corn flavor and retain heat. Put on a big kettle of water so there's plenty of room for the corn ears, and remove the coarse outer husks. Once the water is vigorously boiling, drop in the ears four to six at a time, and leave them in no longer than 30 seconds. (The corn silks pull off when you remove the cooked husks.)

"With supersweet corn the briefer the dip into the boiling water the better. Forget the 3-minute rule. Thirty seconds is just long enough to give it a quick zap. You don't need that zap for digestibility, or taste. But you do need it if you like your corn, as I do, with melted butter."

With an M.A. degree from Radcliffe and Ph.D from Rutgers, Fussell taught on the college level from 1952 to 1972, at Connecticut College, Douglas College, Rutgers University, the New School, and Columbia University. She has lived in France and England, and traveled widely throughout Europe, the near East, Africa, India, China, Russia, and Latin America. Her lecture credits range from the Cambridge School of Culinary Arts and the natural History Museum of the Smithsonian to workshops for professional food writers.

"I'm looking forward to my visit to the maze at Cherry-Crest Farm," Fussell quipped. "I'm always happiest when I'm surrounded by corn, at the height of the growing season!"

Cherry-Crest Farm holds the distinction of being America's longest-running Amazing Maize Maze (there are less than a dozen across the U.S.), and the world's best attended maze with over 120,000 trekking through the stalks since 1996. Called "Liberty Bell in the Land of Liberty," this year's maze opened its stalks to the public on July 9 and in spite of the recent drought has been going strong ever since. The 5-acre maze (there are 2.3 miles of pathways) shows the Liberty Bell within an outline of the state of Pennsylvania, with huge stars in each corner representing Philadelphia, the Poconos and Pittsburgh areas. It is set off by a spectacular 15,570-sq.-ft. American flag created out of 14,000 red, white and blue petunias.

Fussells' Aug. 12-14th appearance is part of a full roster of special events planned each week through Oct. 30th. From Aug. 10-14, the maze will also offer a display of antique gas engines, including one that will be making ice cream throughout the day, and another that shells corn, the old fashioned way. Quite appropriate, considering the fact Fussell dedicates a chapter of her book to the machinery and tools used to harvest corn.

The maze experience also offers a courtyard filled with six Minute Milk Mazes plus a Hay Loft & Corral (perfect for the kids), a Furry Friends Farm (petting zoo), Hee-Haw Hayrides, "Ba-Ba-Q" canteen, and guided tours of the 175-acre working dairy farm that is home to 125 registered holsteins. The maze is also a scheduled stop of the Strasburg Railroad's historic short line (and American's oldest) steam train.

Maze Location & Hours

Cherry-Crest Farm is located in Lancaster County, two miles east of Strasburg (approximately an hour's drive from Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Baltimore and Wilmington). The Liberty Bell in the Land of Liberty maze is open from 10 a.m. until dusk through Oct. 30 including all holiday Mondays. Through Aug. 28 the maze is open Tuesday through Saturday. Beginning Sept. 3rd, the maze will be open Friday and Saturday only. Admission is $7 (age 12 and over), $4 for kids age 5 to 11, and free for children under age 5. Plenty of free parking is available adjacent to the maze.

Recipes and Comments by Betty Fussell From her cookbook "Crazy for Corn"

Tart Berry and Sweet Corn Soup

2 pints strawberries
3 ears fresh white sweet corn (to make 1/2 cups kernels)
1-inch piece of cinnamon stick
3 whole cloves
3 or 4 black peppercorns
3 cups fruity red wine
1/4 cup fresh orange juice
1 to 2 teaspoons balsamic vinegar
Honey if needed

Stem the strawberries. Reserve a few berries for garnish and purée the rest in a blender. Husk the corn and cut the kernels from the ears, scraping the cobs to capture the milk. Add the corn to the blender and purée again.

Grind the cinnamon, cloves, and peppercorns in a spice grinder and add to the purée. Add the wine, orange juice and half the vinegar, and purée until very smooth. Taste for sweetness and add the rest of the vinegar or add honey if needed. Serves four.

"I'm always happiest when surrounded by corn," said Betty Fussell. She will be make a special guest appearance Aug. 12-14 at Cherry-Crest Farm's Amazing Maize Maze to sign her cookbooks and share favorite corn recipes and tips.

Creamy Corn Salsa

"This one is very quick, very easy, and very tasty."

1/2 cup good mayonnaise
1/4 cup creme fraiche or sour cream
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1 teaspoon freshly grated horseradish
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground cumin seeds
Freshly ground black pepper and cayenne to taste
2 cups fresh sweet corn kernals

Beat together all the ingredients but the corn. Fold in the corn and chill until ready to use. Makes about 3 cups.

"On the hottest of August days I long for the coldest of tart soups to appear like magic without labor of heat. My summer dream soup is also a magical color – dark red to deep purple. So naturally I dream of fruit soups, but most of them are too sweet and too thick for my taste. When I found I had both summer strawberries and white sweet corn on hand, I began to juggle the tartness of the berries with the sweetness of the corn. I bound them together with a soft fruity red wine like Zinfandel, low in acid and high in berry flavor, and deepened that berry taste with cinnamon and clove. The corn sweetens and thickens the mixture, but since the sweetness of corn, berry and wine will vary, let your own taste guide you in adding honey for sweetness or a good balsamic vinegar for tartness. The color is a remarkable mauve, which you can accent with floating slices of strawberry."

Dairy Princesses From Five States Attend Training Seminar

CLARION (Clarion Co.) — Plus 90 degree weather and three and a half days packed full of lectures and workshops didn't faze the enthusiasm of 63 young women and 35 adults from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, and New Jersey who attended the recent Dairy Princess Training Seminar at Williamsport.

Lycoming College was again chosen as the site for the 1999 Session which was planned and coordinated by Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc. Aided by 22 industry spokespersons, the young women in attendance were coached in nutrition, dairy farm and processing information, media relations, promotion techniques, public speaking, interviewing, the handling of controversial issues, personal appearance, and social conduct.

Keynote speaker was Alison Littlefield from Watertown, New York, a former New York State Dairy Princess. Alison's topic "To Achieve Your Dreams - Remember Your ABC's" (Attitude, Belief in Yourself, Confidence) provided an excellent springboard for many of the subsequent speakers.

Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Jennifer Dotterer and Alternates Lacey Zakostelecky and Megan Meyers hosted the initial game and "get-to-know-me" pizza party and continued to provide encouragement and assistance to the newly selected royalty throughout the session.

Through the support of ADA/DC Middle-Atlantic this year's Pennsylvania Seminar was available to dairy royalty from other states within its service area. Eleven young women and seven adults took advantage of this opportunity. In addition to ADA/DC — Middle Atlantic, ADADC — Mid East, ADADC — N.Y. and Allied Milk Producers provided personnel and materials to assist in conducting the seminar.

Pennsylvania will select its Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and two alternates at its State Pageant on Saturday evening, September 18, at the Sheraton Hotel in Harrisburg. The Milk Punch Reception will commence at 5:30 p.m., banquet at 6:30, and pageant at 8 p.m. Tickets are available from Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc., 214 South St, Box 640, Clarion, PA 16214.

Gardening, Cooking With Basil

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — One of the most popular herbs among herb gardeners is basil.

This easy-to-grow and vigorous herb is grown for both culinary and ornamental purposes. Some seed catalogs list as many as 18 varieties of basil and even more are available worldwide.

Gardeners are sometimes perplexed by the different varieties and uncertain how to use basil.

"Although basil has distinctly different strains, the varieties are mostly interchangeable in recipes. You can plant different varieties next to each other as they do not cross flavors," said Diane Thornton, a master gardener. She was one of the teachers at a recent workshop on cooking with basil held at the Lebanon County Extension office.

Thorton and two other master gardeners, Debbie Hartman and Barb Long, shared little-known facts about the ancient herb and how to use it in cooking. Participants got to sample the many different dishes the master gardeners prepared for the workshop.

According to Thornton, basil should be the last item planted in your garden because it needs warm temperatures. When planting, plant ⅛-inch deep. Keep roots warm. You can cover with plastic but that encourages damping off, a fungi disease.

The master gardeners have planted basil varieties in the gardens behind the extension office. The workshop included a tour of the gardens. A new variety of ebony basil was planted and is outstanding for its taste, aroma, and dark purple beauty.

Purple opal basil has lovely deep purple leaves that contrast with green-leafed plants in vegetable and herb gardens and make a colorful addition to ornmamental flower beds. As a culinary herb, opal basil is a striking addition to salads, an elegant purple coloring to jelly and vinegars. Lemon and purple ruffled varieties also are planted in the garden.

"Basil flowers are beautiful, but for healthy plants, pinch off flowers to encourage leaf growth if you grow basil for culinary use. If you grow basil for ornamental purposes, you can allow flowers to remain on the stem," Thornton said.

For culinary use, basil is probably best known as a wonder enhancer for tomato dishes. The herb can be used fresh or dried or frozen for use.

Basil is at its prime when flowers are on the verge of flowering. The best time of the day to harvest basil for culinary use is between 9:30 a.m. to 10 a.m.

For preservation purposes, always wash and dry before preserving or using. Wash, place on a paper towel and roll up to dry. After the excess water is absorbed, place on a single layer of parchment paper. You can use a dehydrator set at 120 degrees or lower or you can place in a gas stove with a pilot light for a day or hang in small bundles in a dry, dark area.

After the leaves are dry, place in an air-tight container in a dry, dark, cool area or in refrigerator.

Hartman said that to maximize flavor as much as possible, basil can be frozen. Pack whole leaves in a clean, dry jar, cap tightly and store in freezer until ready to use.

Here are some of the recipes, Hartman shared at the workshop.

PURPLE BASIL AND ORANGE JELLY

1½ cups packed, washed and dried basil leaves

Zest of bright-skinned medium orange, cut off in 1-inch strips

6-10 whole cloves

1⅔ cups strained orange juice

½ cup red wine vinegar

4 cups sugar

3-ounce pouch liquid pectin

5-6 allspice berries, optional

Chop basil leaves and place in saucepan. Twist strips of orange zest over saucepan to extract oil that will fly out in droplets, then drop each strip of zest into the pan. Add cloves, orange juice, and red wine vinegar.

Diane Thornton points out a variety of basils. Basil is popular for its sweet pungency, exotic fragrance, and culinary seasoning.

Set pan over medium heat and heat ingredients to the boiling point, stirring once or twice. Remove from heat, cover and let set 30 minutes.

Pour mixture into a fine sieve set over a bowl and press on the solids to extract as much flavor as possible. Measure 1¾ cups liquid into a preserving pan. Discard the solids.

Add sugar to liquid and bring mixture to boiling over medium heat. As soon as it reaches a hard boil, stir in liquid pectin. When the jelly mixture reaches a full hard boil, time the boil for one minute exactly. Remove jelly from heat.

Skim off any foam and pour at once into hot jars. Wipe rims, and seal with new lids. Process in boiling water bath for 10 minutes.

CHEDDAR CRISPS

8-ounces grated cheddar cheese

½ cup butter, room temperature

½ teaspoon tabasco sauce

1 teaspoon prepared mustard

1 cup flour

2 tablespoons chopped purple opal basil

1½ cups rice crispy cereal

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Makes about 40 crackers.

In a large bowl, mix cheese, butter, tabasco, and mustard. Blend in flour and basil. When combined, stir in cereal and blend well. Shape into small balls. Place on greased baking sheet. Flatten balls with a floured glass bottom or cookie press. Bake 15 minutes. Serve warm.

The crisps can be made several days ahead and stored in an airtight container or frozen. Reheat 5 minutes when needed.

PESTO

3 to 3½ cups fresh, unblemished basil leaves (no stems), rinsed, patted dry, and packed gently into the measure

1 cup fine quality olive oil

3 large cloves garlic, peeled, sliced, or more to taste

3 tablespoons pine nuts or chopped toasted walnuts

½ cup freshly grated imported parmesan cheese

½ teaspoon salt, or to taste

Few grinds pepper, black or white, optional

Yield: about 2 cups.

Combine everything in food processor. Run the machine, stopping to scrape down the sides of the container occasionally, until the pesto has reached the texture you like, either smooth or finely chopped.

Use immediately or cover and refrigerate.

To freeze, follow the above recipe but omit the cheese. Pack into cup-size freezer containers. To use, thaw in refrigerator and blend 3 to 4 tablespoons freshly grated parmesan cheese.

Lower fat options:

- Substitute a ripe tomato and 1 to 2 tablespoons olive oil as the liquid for the pesto.
- Cut the olive oil in half and add ½ cup chicken broth, white wine, or water to compensate for the missing oil.
- Skimp a little on the cheese and nuts. Toasting the nuts brings out more flavor.

ITALIAN SEASONING BLEND

¼ cup crumbled dried thyme leaves

¼ cup crumbled dried basil leaves

¼ cup crumbled dried sweet marjoram leaves

2 tablespoons crumbled dried savory leaves, optional

2 tablespoons crumbled dried oregano leaves

4 teaspoons crumbled dried rosemary leaves

3 to 5 teaspoons crumbled dried mint leaves, to taste

2 teaspoons crumbled dried leaf sage or rubbed sage

¼ to 1 teaspoon garlic powder, optional

Combine all ingredients and crumble them further but don't powder them, by processing the mixture briefly in a blender, a mini food processor, or an electric spice/coffee mill.

Pack the herbs tightly in a small, clean, dry jar. Cap tightly and store in a cool cupboard for a few weeks or, even better, in the refrigerator or freezer for months.

CHEESE TORTA WITH BASIL, OLIVES, AND SUN-DRIED TOMATOES

Large basil leaves

16-ounces cream cheese, softened

¼ to ½ cup milk

3 cloves garlic, minced

Salt and freshly ground pepper

Generous ½ cup finely chopped basil leaves

1 tablespoon olive oil

½ cup finely chopped sundried tomatoes, packed in oil, drained

½ cup finely chopped black olives

Use a 1-quart domed bowl (not flat like a soup bowl) and a piece of dampened cheesecloth to line the bowl. Arrange some basil leaves, face side down on the cheesecloth.

In another bowl, mix the cream cheese and just enough milk so the mixture is smooth and fairly easy to spread. Add one clove of the minced garlic, season with salt and pepper, and mix well. In a third bowl, combine the remaining basil with the remaining garlic and add olive oil to make a thick paste.

Spread one-fourth of cheese carefully over the basil leaves in the bottom of the domed bowl. Evenly add sun-dried tomatoes, spreading them to the edge of the cheese, and press down gently. Spread one-fourth of the cheeses over the tomatoes. Spread the basil and garlic over this layer, pressing lightly. Add a third layer of cheese, and cover it with olives, spreading them evenly to the edge and pressing gently.

Finish with the remaining layer of cheeses, cover this with whole large basil leaves and press down gently. Fold the cheesecloth in to cover the cheese torta and refrigerate at least two hours before serving.

To serve, fold back the cheesecloth and turn it out onto a serving plate. Carefully remove the cheesecloth from what is now the top of the torta. Let the torta stand at room temperature for 10 to 15 minutes before serving.

Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

Information Overload?
Internet Site Aims To Streamline Farmers' Lives

The information age has arrived, but the idea of a "paperless" society certainly hasn't come to fruition. In fact, some days it may seem like the information available for a single farm would fill enough paper to wipe out a small forest.

All this information can help producers make better decisions, says Kip Pendleton, president of DirectAg.com, but it can be a daunting task to wade through the facts and figures and then try to make sense of it all.

The Internet is one of the latest additions to a number of information resources available to producers, and it certainly has the potential to further add to information overload. However, Pendleton believes the Internet will be the tool to help turn information into knowledge.

"For example, through a site such as DirectAg.com, producers can build their own personal profile and go back to this profile whenever they visit. With computers storing this information, farmers can quickly get what they're looking for anytime they decide to make a repeat purchase or inquiry."

Pendleton compares the Internet Age with the era where merchants truly knew their customers. "When a producer comes back to the site and logs in, he is instantly recognized and can be directed to new products and services where he has shown interest in the past. It's not unlike the days of the general store where the store owner knew customers when they walked in the door, and he could direct them to the items they would be most interested in."

The "Virtual" Agronomist

Don Jacoby, vice president of customer relations for DirectAg.com stresses that the company is a knowledge-building center for producers, not simply another site for gathering information. The site has a number of information providers, designed to give farmers in-depth information, rather than just news from wire feeds. One of the main providers is Farm Progress, a publisher of monthly state farm publications. Farm Progress has editors located across the United States who will contribute daily news articles on the DirectAg Web site.

DirectAg.com also will feature virtual consultants to customize information about a producer's operation. The consultants sift through information for the farmer and boil it down to an executive summary. "By assuring that producers only get the information they need, DirectAg.com helps producers maximize their time," Jacoby says. "They can customize information searches for their operation, and, if they want more information, can continue to drill down to the information most relevant to them."

The primary consulting firm available through DirectAg.com is Agri-Growth?,? the premier independent agronomic education, research and service company in North America. Well known for its training, research, resource materials and diagnostic services, Agri-Growth provides producers with a "virtual" agronomist, accessible through DirectAg.com.

"Knowledge is power. Producers know that understanding and adopting the latest technologies is a clear advantage," says Dr. Jim Ladlie, president of Agri-Growth. "DirectAg.com gives us the opportunity to distribute real-time knowledge. Lowering costs or adding value are the two ways farmers can benefit DirectAg.com allows us to do both."

In addition to providing advice, Agri-Growth will support an online community later this year. Agri-Growth and DirectAg.com will implement moderated online discussion forums. During these scheduled forums, producers will be able to take part in discussions on timely crop production issues, receive agronomic advice, and monitor responses to questions posed by other farm producers. Additionally, producers will be able to e-mail questions and receive agronomic information on a variety of topics, access articles on crop-related issues, and retrieve educational and diagnostic materials.

Comparison Shopping on Your Terms

Once a producer has come to some conclusions on what inputs are right for his farm, he can compare products and services from several companies simultaneously, on his own time, and make decisions about which to purchase.

"Our business provides all the information from several brand-name companies in one shot. Farmers don't have to take the time to meet with many different salespeople and then compare them all after the fact," Pendleton emphasizes.

"DirectAg.com will complement local sources by giving producers a resource where, in one place, they can review credible information on a variety of name brand products," he continues. "After they get the information from DirectAg.com, they can then turn to the local dealer to make the purchase, or they can finance and purchase the products through our site."

Pendleton says orders can be made at any time, and that they are sent directly to DirectAg.com. Customer service representatives are available online or by phone, and orders are processed and shipped directly to the farm. If there are questions after the order is delivered, the customer can contact DirectAg.com for answers.

"Customers can be assured that all orders are kept in a secure, private environment," Pendleton stresses. "The details are shared only with the company you buy from - no one else." Just as in working with the local dealer, farmers will receive competitive prices and discounts, he says. "The difference is that in the current distribution system, farmers have to negotiate separate deals for different inputs with each manufacturer. Eventually, by ordering through DirectAg.com, farmers can receive volume discounts from the input package they purchase from multiple manufacturers. "We're putting control in the farmer's hands," Pendleton concludes. "DirectAg.com is a facilitator because we give farmers access to the information they need. Also, electronic buying power helps control the price of products. Having a broader view of the options available to them should empower consumers in knowing they have received the best value for their dollar."

Buying On The Internet — Is It Safe?

E-commerce, the buying of products and services over the Internet, is moving quickly from industry buzzword to consumer reality. Today, customers in search of convenience and wider selection trust their credit information to the increasingly proven safeguards of online technology.

Companies Offer E-commerce Security

According to Kip Pendleton of DirectAg.com, many producers are comfortable using their credit card to buy a $20 book online. But when asked about buying $20,000 worth of seed online, farmers are interested, but a bit more concerned.

Most people would agree that in any situation it is sensible to be more cautious when dealing with larger sums of money on the Internet. Warren Golla is the director of the Development Center at Javelin Technology, which offers secure e-commerce solutions to a diverse range of businesses, including financial institutions. He says, "When the customer clicks and transfers a large sum of money, that's a huge vote of trust that e-businesses must live up to. At Javelin, we ensure every transaction is protected behind several layers of security and that the only parties who can see the information are the customer and the people at companies like DirectAg.com who take the orders."

Additionally, Golla says the track records of online companies are proving that transactions made on a secure Web site are typically as safe as conventional person-to-person transactions. He points out that most thefts of account information occur in conventional retail settings where paper or carbon copies have the opportunity to fall into the wrong hands.

"Today's e-commerce Web sites, such as DirectAg.com, are guarded behind firewalls and state-of-the-art encryption," says Golla. "But that's no reason for consumers to get careless. We need to remind everyone that the biggest security risk with any online transaction is at the customer end."

Sensibility Provides Security

Doug Rohde, a consultant at Javelin Technology, says customers can protect themselves by taking the following precautions.

• Choose your password carefully. If someone steals or can guess your password, the security of the Web site won't matter. It is recommended to avoid using birth dates, social security numbers, anything that may be on public record and common words. The best passwords are a combination of letters and numbers that you can remember, but can't be guessed by others. For added security, change your password on a regular basis.

• Protect your terminal. Don't walk away from the computer without first logging off of your account. A co-worker, your children or a thief could wreak havoc within seconds.

• Protect e-mail. Use password-protected e-mail and don't share your e-mail account with anyone else. Never give your password to anyone, even over the phone. Legitimate Web-based merchants won't ask for it.

• Use a separate computer or profile for business. If you use a Microsoft Windows operating system, your Windows password can add an extra layer of security that keeps others from using the system. Plus, keeping clever children or unauthorized family members away from your business transactions can provide added peace of mind.

Challenge Days '99 Gets The Dirt On New Technologies

Computers and the Internet are powerful tools to build knowledge, but sometimes it takes dirt under the fingernails to fully understand new technologies.

Challenge Days were created so producers can see new technologies in action and build their knowledge base to make the best decisions for their operation, says Dr. Jim Ladlie, president of Agri-Growth, Inc.

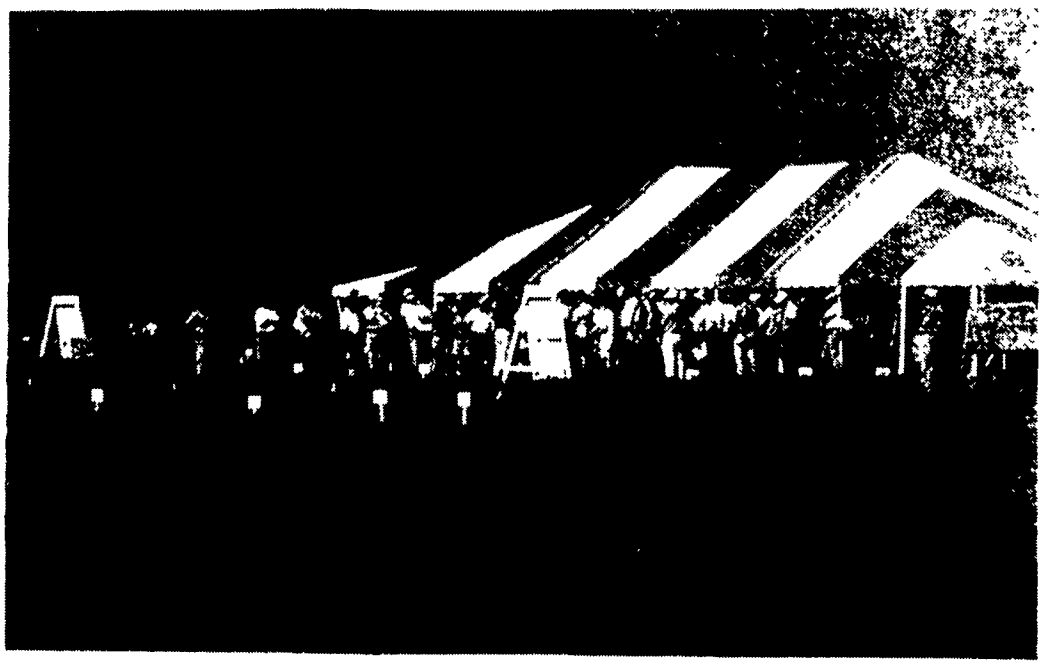
This year, Challenge Days will be held at the Agri-Growth Research Farm near Hollandale, Minn., on August 17-19, and at the Novartis Seeds Research Station near Goehner, Neb., on August 31-September 2.

Challenge Days '99 is a series of one-day field events where agronomic experts provide hands-on training. Eight different knowledge stops explain the latest in science and technology behind new products and how to apply them at the farm level. The theme of Challenge Days is "Knowledge is Power - Gain a Competitive Edge." Profit impact factors are incorporated into each stop to help growers increase productivity and profitability.

"The goal of Challenge Days '99 is to present knowledge in an unbiased atmosphere for growers and retailers to compare and evaluate new technology and crop production systems," Ladlie says. "Challenge Days is not a trade show, equipment show or a seed company yield demonstration. It is a premier educational learning event designed to improve crop production skills with a focus on new innovations and technologies.

"The ultimate goal is to give producers more ways to increase their profits by being on the leading edge of new technology," Ladlie concludes.

Tickets are available through the Challenge Days web site, www.challengedays.com, or by calling the Challenge Days hotline at 888-875-2425. For additional information, contact Agri-Growth at 507-889-4371.



Internet Makes Advanced Degrees In Agriculture Convenient

Leading food and agribusiness enterprises into the next millennium will place unparalleled demands on the capabilities of tomorrow's managers. The globalization of markets, the explosion of new technology, the fragmenting demands of consumers, the rapidly evolving role of governments, and the intense pressure of competition all combine to create a marketplace that will reward only the visionary, educated and innovative.

Given this rapid pace of change, lifelong continuing education is no longer a luxury - it is a necessity. Top-tiered graduate management programs are being developed to prepare leaders as they assume the challenges of directing their organizations to succeed in the global food system of the 21st century. The use of the Internet in these graduate programs creates opportunities where none have previously existed.

For example, Purdue University offers a fully accredited MBA degree with a specific focus on the food and agricultural marketplace, with 90 percent of the courses conducted over the Internet. Purdue relies on distance education technology via the World Wide Web to minimize time away from the workplace and to allow participants to work toward a degree on their own schedule. The convenience of continuing education programs such as these will help prepare tomorrow's ag leaders for success. New York Ayrshire Club Taking Golden Milk Sale Consignments

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. — Demand for cattle capable of high protein production has increased significantly as a result of the proposed change in the Federal Order pricing mechanism scheduled to take effect October 1.

The dairy farmer's pay price will in part be determined by the pounds of protein shipped. Ayrshires are known for the high protein content of their milk. They are well suited to the change in the milk pricing system.

On Oct. 16, the New York Ayrshire Club will be a co-sponsor of the Golden Milk Sale to be held at Empire Livestock in Dryden, N.Y. Empire Livestock and Dairylea Cooperative are providing the opportunity for dairy farmers to acquire dairy cattle capable of high protein production.

The New York Ayrshire Club is now accepting consignments for the sale. Both registered and higrades Ayrshires are acceptable. Consignors must have acceptable production records for this special event.

The consignor's commission is 12 percent with a portion of the proceeds going to the New York Ayrshire Club for their promotion efforts. The Golden Milk Sale is to be well advertised and provide Ayrshire breeders with an opportunity to promote their herd.

Ayrshire breeders that are interested in consigning to the Golden Milk Sale should contact Jim Patsos at United Ag Services, 12 North Park Street, Seneca Falls, NY 13148. He can also be reached at 315-568-2750 days or at home 315-568-8515.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Monsanto Company (NYSE:MTC) and American Cyanamid Company, a subsidiary of American Home Products Corporation (NYSE:AHP), announced recently a multiyear supply agreement that will allow Cyanamid to purchase glyphosate herbicide from Monsanto for use in Cyanamid premixes in the United States.

Hoffman Seeds Announces Outstanding Wheat Test Results

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Hoffman Seeds has announced outstanding yield results for three of the firm's key wheat varieties.

According to Hoffman Seeds President Fred M. Lepley, field strip testing in Pennsylvania produced extremely high yields of Hoffman 95 Brand (94 bushels); Hoffman 89 Brand (89.4 bushels); and Hoffman 37 Brand (86.7 bushels).

"In addition to these outstanding yield results," said Lepley, "these performers provide the additional advantage of above-average, industry-leading test weights and a wide adaptability throughout the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic region." Hoffman conducts field strip tests for wheat at 18 different locations across the territory.

Hoffman 95 Brand wheat is a medium season variety with excellent standability characteristics and good field tolerance to foliar disease. Hoffman 89 provides consistent performance, excellent winter hardiness and, as a prolific tillering variety, is a good choice for late planting situations. Hoffman 37 is a medium, early-awned variety that performs well under low- to medium-management inputs and is recommended for all soil types.

Each tested variety was seed-treated with Dividend XL, a systemic fungicide that offers broad-spectrum disease control. Dividend XL is proven to be reliable in controlling smuts, pythium, root and seed rots, seedborne scab and septoria, and suppression of root diseases, and provides protection against early season foliar diseases such as powdery mildew.

Fall Planting Perennial Ryegrass Gives High Returns

OGDENSBURG, N.J. — Traditionally farmers have been planting or renovating pastures in the spring, like most other crops. Results of spring planting are good in most occasions and for most grass species. Also planting legumes (alfalfa and clovers) in the spring has been a common practice.

However, fall planting and renovating of pastures is a very good alternative. There are quite a few advantages, according to Barenbrug Northeast:

- The timeframe for preparing a seedbed and planting is wider and less weather-dependent in the fall
- Higher soil temperatures allow quicker germination
- Pasture is out of production in a low growing period of the year, unlike in the spring where you sacrifice the prime growing period of the year
- Killing the existing vegetation is easier to do in the early fall
- Very few weeds establish in the fall compared to the spring
- Most weeds that do establish in the fall will be killed immediately in the winter.

Not all grass species are adapted to fall planting. The grass needs to establish fast enough to endure the first frost. Also the grass needs to be winterhardy to ensure winter survival.

Perennial ryegrass is by far the best species to fall plant. It can be planted later than other species because it establishes so quickly.

Recommended varieties are the winterhardy blends such as BG-34 Super, Tetra-Plua or BG-14. It is recommended to frost seed a legume the following spring.

Timothy, tall fescue, and orchardgrass are also suitable for fall planting; however, they establish slower and should therefore be planted earlier.

Recent on-farm trials show that the cost involved with fall renovating a pasture is between $75 and $110 per acre.

The extra spring growth of high quality forage made the milk production per acre more than double compared to the nonrenovated pasture. At a milk price of $12 hundredweight, an extra 900 pounds of milk per acre will pay for the expenses.

In this particular trial the costs were recouped after just two grazings in the first spring. All additional extra milk production in the season and years to follow is profit.

Narrow Tractor Maneuvers Through Orchards, Vineyards, Nurseries

MOLINE, Ill. – Only 36 inches wide, the John Deere model 4100 Narrow (4100N) compact utility tractor is designed for the special needs of working in orchards, vineyards, nurseries, and tree farms. The tractor's minimal width allows it to easily navigate narrow rows without disturbing the crop.

This 20-hp tractor is powered by a 3-cylinder, liquid-cooled diesel engine. The 4100 N is available with a gear transmission. The sliding gear/collar shift transmission provides eight forward speeds and two reverse.

The 4100N features an open-center hydraulic system, hydrostatic power steering, and wet disk brakes. Standard four-wheel drive can be engaged on the go to increase traction in slippery conditions. The tractor also has an antiwrap shield to prevent trash and debris from wrapping around the driveline.

Numerous implements give the 4100 Narrow versatility, including a disk and a subsoiler. A 540-rpm rear PTO accommodates a tiller.

Storage Products Company Celebrates 50th

DEKALB, Ill. – Developed in 1949, the Harvestore structure answered one of agriculture's most challenging problems; the efficient storage of high moisture grain and medium moisture forage. The advantages of glass-fused-to-steel were immediately recognized and more than 70,000 of the cobalt blue structures have been built around the world.

Now, A.O. Smith Engineered Storage Product Company (AOSESPC) and its worldwide dealer network are celebrating the 50th anniversary of the feed storage innovation that revolutionized livestock agriculture.

Headquartered in DeKalb, AOSESPC distributes the Harvestore feed storage structure as well as the Slurrystore® manure storage structure, complementary agitation systems, and Sierra™ brand manure processing equipment.

The Harvestore gained immediate acceptance because of the many benefits of glass-fused-to-steel. For example, the structure is recommended for efficiently storing grain at moisture levels of 22 percent to 35 percent and for storing forage at moisture levels of 40 percent to 55 percent.

Utilizing the same glass-fused-to-steel technology, the Slurrystore, an engineered, above-ground positive containment manure storage structure, has capacities up to several million gallons.

INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS REDEFINED; HERE WE GO AGAIN

James P. Sargent
Bucks County
Extension Agent
Business Management

The federal courts and the Internal Revenue Service have revisited an area of the law which has had an increasingly significant impact upon the green industry: defining the independent contractor.

Many companies have consultants, technical service providers and other professionals, who, from time to time, render services to the business or its clients. Determining whether these individuals are employees or, as we would prefer, independent contractors is an important issue. This is an issue which could result in additional expenses for the company if they are excluded as independent contractors and deemed employees. The additional expenses include, but are not limited to, employer contributions for Medicare, FICA, and workman's compensation. In addition, the agency could be fined by the Internal Revenue Service for failing to withhold income tax, as the law defines.

In addition to federal regulations, it is important for the business to become familiar with individual state's definitions. Most states define an independent contractor as one who accomplishes a specified task for a specified price and retains the right to control the manner in which the work is accomplished.

Federal requirements are broader and harder to pinpoint. While there is still no one determining factor the IRS and the Federal Courts look to, the following considerations are the latest issued when making such a distinction. (If you remember, IRS had a list of 20 items that they used in determining the distinction between an independent contractor and an employee).

• The degree of control exercised over the worker — the more control that a business maintains over the worker, the more likely it is that the worker should be considered an employee. If the individual is given freedom in the production of the work, the more likely it is that the person will be considered an independent contractor.

• The relative investments of the worker and the "employer." The courts and the IRS will look to factors like the amount of time, energy, and individual tailoring the individual needs to input to fulfill the needs of the company. And, on the other hand, the courts will consider the relative return the individual receives for the effort put forth. The more specialized the work is, the more likely the relationship will be characterized as "employee/employer."

• How the opportunity for profit and loss is determined by the "employer." Courts tend to favor pre-established fee schedules for professionals who are performing specific tasks for a client when ruling in favor of "independent contractor" status. The more removed the profit loss statements of the two entities are, the more likely the individual performing the task will be viewed as an independent contractor.

• The skill and initiative required in performing the job. The more specialized the skill the individual possesses, the more likely the individual will be viewed as an independent contractor. In addition, the courts will consider how frequently the agency needs the particular skill to run their business. The more occasional the skill is required, the more likely the ruling will favor an independent contractor outcome.

• The permanency of the relationship. All independent contractor agreements should be put into writing and the document should contain a specific length of time the relationship is expected to last. The shorter the term, the more likely the individual is an independent contractor.

According to IRS regulations, the 20-item checklist has not gone away completely. Don't get lulled into a false sense that you now can turn all of your employees into independent contractors. Redefining independent contractors does not mean a redefinition of the employer/employee relationship. As a business owner, one must still be careful with labor relationships, because IRS penalties and fines for not following the law can be stiff.

Sequoia Riders Eligible For District Horse Show

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County 4-H Horse and Pony Clubs recently held County 4-H roundup.

Roundup is a gathering of horse and pony clubs throughout the county who meet to compete against each other to qualify for the district level show. After that, they hope to go on to state competition.

These shows are an opportunity for the participants to win awards for their efforts in grooming and general caretaking of their animals and conditioning and training them.

Showpersons who placed in the top three of any class would then go on to the district show. The following Sequoia Riders Club members are now eligible to show at the district level: Jessie Barker of Elizabethtown placed third in English grooming and showmanship. Jessie's project is an Arabian named "Shopaz." Jessie Espenshade also from Elizabethtown is competing with a Palomino named "Legend of Scooby Doo." Jessie placed second in the Englilsh grooming and showmanship.

Katie Parmer of Elizabethtown placed thrid in western grooming and showmanship and also placed second in western pleasure ponies (over 13.2 and not over 14.2). Katie's project is an Appaloosa named "King Diamond K." Jen Slater of Elizabethtown placed third in stock seat equitation senior division. Jen's project is a Quarter Horse named "Bo Jacks Sugar King."

The 4-H district show will be at the Lebanon Equine Center (Lebanon Fairgrounds) on Aug. 28, and will begin promptly at 8 a.m. Competitors come from Adams, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Lancaster, Lebanon, Perry, and York counties.

N.Y. Farm Bureau Young Farmer And Rancher Achievement Award Finalists Selected

GLENMONT, N.Y. — The future of New York Agriculture is, without a doubt, going to be a success story for many.

The applicants for the New York Farm Bureau Young Farmer and Rancher (YFR) Achievement Award were as diverse as the state's agricultural industry. The quality of the candidates added to the difficulty of the judging process.

Finalists are:

• Henry L. Sandefer, a member of the Oneida County Farm Bureau Board. Sandefer in partnership with his family, owns and operates Sandefer Hill Farm in Rome, N.Y., where updating his operation, the milking herd, young stock, crops, and seed business keep him busy. His involvement in a variety of agricultural industry organizations and as a volunteer graduate assistant for the Dale Carnegie Course have provided an abundance of opportunity for growth in many ways.

• Jennifer G. Halsey of Water Mill, Long Island, a member of the Long Island Farm Bureau board of directors, as well as the NYFB State YFR Committee. Halsey, the 12th generation of her farming family, and three family members partner in their diversified operation. Her sphere of responsibility includes all aspects from cropping to sales, via their farm store and wholesaling, for the peaches, pumpkins, apples, blueberries, and beekeeping and agricultural education outreach. Community and agricultural involvement rounds out the busy life of this finalist.

• Dean and Melanie Casey of Schaghticoke, members of the Rensselaer County Farm Bureau of which Dean is president. The Caseys are the fourth generation to operate their farm. Their enterprise is a purchased feed dairy operation with 100 head of milkers that are complemented by custom calf-raising utilizing two greenhouses, where they raise approximately 200 head each year. Melanie and Dean's partnership brings varied expertise to their operation and to the many organizations within agriculture and the community where they give so much. Familyu life has just expanded with the birth of Nicholas Dean, who with his brother, Kevin, may be the next farming generation.

The state winner will be selected at the New York Farm Bureau annual meeting in December in Albany, and will represent New York at the American Farm Bureau Convention in Houston, Texas, in January 2000.

FARMERS ARE LOYAL TO HOOBER'S SALESMEN BECAUSE THEY ARE EXPERTS AT TAILORING EQUIPMENT PACKAGES

"Hoober gave me the opportunity to rent a tractor for the summer and put that money toward the purchase price of the tractor itself They bent over backwards to help me in every way possible"

Rob Seabright
West Berlin, PA

LEASE

"I get my cost per hour down to a pretty low rate and instead of having my guy in the shop fixing an old tractor, he is in the field making money"

Abe Barley
Millersville, PA

OWN

"Hoober service and know-how made my tractor a tractor worth keeping, and that's why I chose to purchase my tractor from Hoober"

Richard Bratton
Millerstown, PA

WHAT FACTORS DO YOU NEED TO CONSIDER IN DECIDING WHETHER TO:

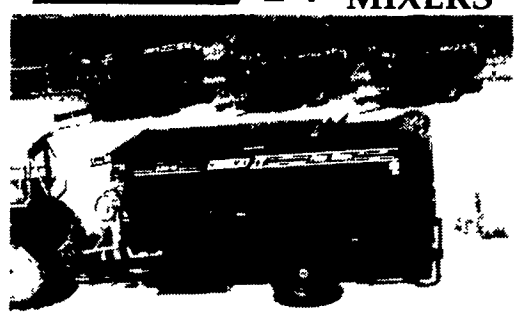
ROTO-MIX IV FEED MIXERS



With ROTO-MIX IV you reduce fines, minimize shrinkage, and eliminate dead spots. The gentle tumbling action mixes fragile flaked and high-moisture ingredients without grinding, resulting in a fluffier, more nutritional ration.

The ROTO-MIX end-to-end... side-to-side mixing system provides the most thorough TMR available, ensuring that your cattle will consume a balanced ration of nutrients in every pound of feed they eat.

Fred C. Frey & Sons Honored

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Fred C. Frey & Sons has been recognized as a Historic Angus Herd by the American Angus Association.

Fred C. Frey establilshed the herd in 1948 with the purchase of 11 bred heifers. Unfortunately, he was killed in an auto accident later that year and never saw the calves born. His son, Fred H. Frey, who was 16 at the time, took over the herd and the Frey family has continued the production of Angus cattle since.

Through the years two more generations have become involved, Fred H. Frey's sons, Fritz C. Frey, and grandson, Fred Christian Frey. The herd, which currently includes 150 cows and 45 yearling heifers, is also known as Twin Oak Farms.

In recognition of this honor, the Frey family has been presented with a certificate signed by the president of the American Angus Association.

The Historic Angus Herd Award is available to currently active members of the American Angus Association who own a herd that has been in the continuous production of registered Angus cattle for 50 years or more by the same person or members of the immediate family. Since 1988 the American Angus Association has recognized with this special award more than 100 herds for their longevity and contributions to the Angus breed.

In the small store set in the middle of farm buildings, Sidney Riggs markets ostrich eggs for artists, leather boots made from the ostrich hides of birds he raises, frozen ostrich meat, and llama fiber.

Sherry Lynch, third from left, manager of the birds at ErReR Hill Farms, inform a PAAE tour group about the young ostriches with owner Sidney Riggs. The farm hosted the tour in Somerset County, where the 1999 PAAE Summer Institute was held.

Diversified Agriculture At ErReR Hill Is Fascinating Tour For State Ag Educators

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

FRIEDENS (Somerset Co.) — It was apparent by their rapt fascination with the diversified agriculture at ErReR Hill Farms that state ag teachers attending the 1999 PAAE Summer Institute in Somerset County could have stayed all day.

Ostriches, llamas, 500 head of Angus cattle, miniature horses use the corn, soybeans, oats and hay raised for the farm's livestock on Sidney Rigg's 1,500-acre spread.

And conservation is always an objective. Some 27 spring development projects were done by the farm operators on their own and other efforts here have merited top state awards.

"It is all new and interesting," remarked Michael Kennis, Clearfield High School's ag teacher who has worked mainly with dairy cattle and sheep. "It seems we have to be more diversified."

Kennis thought the worthwhile projects going full tilt at ErReR Hill were giving him a broader vision of agricultural careers and professions that young people could pursue if the many options in agriculture were presented to them.

Teacher Bob Lauffer from the Garden Spot High School in New Holland gave his attention to the marketing aspect.

"What they are doing is great," he said, after seeing the small store that Riggs built midst the immaculate farm's main campus. Its inventory consists of leather goods made from the hides of their own ostriches, frozen ostrich meat inspected by the USDA, decorative ostrich eggs, and llama fiber.

Beautiful leather boots for gentlemen and ladies, wallets, and key holders were on display. The hide is meticulously removed by a specialist (a miscut greatly drops the value), sent away to be tanned, then returned to a Somerset shoe manufacturer who, under the Abilene label, creates the footwear for Riggs.

Uniquely patterned, that attractive leather is both durable and comparatively inexpensive for the purchaser. One educator who bought something on the spot, agreed.

Riggs and his manager of birds, Sherry Lynch, guided the tour.

The roomy indoor ostrich pens on the opposite side open to the outdoors where the birds can exercise on a slope.

From incubation to the market, the ostrich eggs are carefully handled. Riggs said the chicks are raised to a weight of 200 to 250 pounds in a period of 12 to 14 months.

"We have more non-fertile eggs than we want," Riggs said. "We are trying to figure out what to do about it.

"We arfe looking now to the hide being the primary product and meat, the secondary product," he said.

When Governor Tom Ridge was recently in Somerset, ErReR Hill's ostrich eggs were served to the party for breakfast.

Lynch said one enormous egg equals two dozen chicken eggs. They say there is no discernible difference in taste; however, anyone with a hankering to acquire one of the big girl's hefty offerings may rethink his economics when learning they are $25 apiece.

Lynch says don't let your guard down around the birds.

"Once you step inside, it's their game," she cautioned. That includes the young ones. "They are very territorial," she said.

When an egg is espied in the pen, everyone waits until the place is vacated before entering to retrieve it.

Riggs said in 1998 the birds' egg production was 400.

In the incubation building (off-limits to visitors), the humidity is kept at 18 percent, Lynch said. The building has central air.

"We like to see a 16 percent weight loss during incubation," she reported.

A "booming" noise was heard as a male ostrich approached the high tensile fence to curiously eye the intruders.

They likewise were inquisitive about him.

First off, we accepted the challenge of another male and paused for a brief physical encounter over the dividing fence. Feeling refreshed from asserting his male dominance, he then

Crop Stress Updates, New Production Technology To Highlight Field Day

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Assessing yield potential of corn isn't easy but it is essential, especially for corn growers in drought-stressed areas of Ohio, said Bob Nielsen, corn management systems specialist at Purdue University.

"Accurate yield estimates are important when corn is severely stressed because the grower may have forward contracted to sell more bushels than he is ultimately able to deliver, and the grower may be faced with economic ruin if yields are below some threshhold level," Nielsen said.

Nielsen will discuss methods of assessing the yield potential of corn in a drought-stressed year during the Tri-County Agronomy Field Day, Aug. 19 from 2 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at Slater Farm near Hebron, Ohio. He will present three 60-minute programs throughout the day with sessions beginning at 2:30 p.m., 3:30 p.m. and 5 p.m. Growers, crop consultants and crop input providers could benefit from the discussions.

"Yield potential is not easy to estimate in healthy cornfields, let alone stressed ones," Nielsen said. "The trick is to sample enough areas to accurately estimate numbers of ears per acre and the size of the ears. Then, a rather simple formula is applied to estimate grain yield per acre."

The formula, however, does include a "fudge factor" for average kernel weight which could cause producers to overestimate or underestimate grain yield.

"But, I assume the formula will put the yield in the proverbial ballpark of plus or minus 30 bushels per acre," he said.

Other drought-related corn issues Nielsen may address during his programs based on conditions in central Ohio at the time of the field day include the risks of toxic nitrate levels in grazed or green-chopped corn forage, effects of drought stress on the nutrient value of feed grain, the risk of herbicide carryover in 2000 and impacts of drought on a grower's 2000 nutrient program.

The Tri-County Field Day showcases some of the latest crop production technology entering the marketplace and updates producers on some of the critical stress factors influencing crops this year, said Howard Siegrist, agriculture and natural resources agent at the Licking County office of Ohio State University Extension and one of the event coordinators. The event traditionally attracts more than 300 peple from 15 counties.

In addition to Nielsen's drought presentations, other topics to be discussed include identifying and managing disease in late season corn, soybean seeding rates in regards to today's equipment and herbicide programs, maximizing soil health, performance of potato leafhopper-resistant alfalfa varieties, and moving from a bulk commodity to a value-added identity preserved or niche market crop, such as tofu soybeans or high-oil corn.

"Miles Farm Supply of Owensboro, Ky., has been a national leader in developing identity preserved markets and working with their growers for a win-win experience," Siegrist said. "During the field day, they'll disucss opportunities for Ohio farmers to get a piece of the action."

The Tri-County Field Day is sponsored by the Fairfield, Licking and Perry county offices of Ohio State University Extension, Soil and Water Conservation Districts and the Natural Resources Conservation Service Event participants can earn three hours of Certified Crop Advisor credit and one hour fo Pesticide Applicator Training credit.

A free pork chop dinner will be served at 6 p.m., but participants must be present by 3 p.m. to assure availability of a meal. The Slater Farm is located south of Interstate 70 off of state Rt. 37.

For more information, contact the Licking County office of Ohio State University Extension at (740) 349-6904.

Diversified Agriculture At ErReR Hill

Once his forbidding expression turned threateningly on a nearby photographer when the click and whirr of an automatic camera commanded his attention.

The farm is home to 27 llamas, but several others are boarded, Riggs said, explaining they are sold as guard animals for herds of sheep and goats.

One female show animal from ErReR Hill Farms made it to Nationals, Riggs said.

To maintain a string of show animals, regardless of the species being promoted, time and again has proved a successful market strategy for ErReR Hill.

Lynch adores the furry creatures as evidenced when the herd enveloped the petite blond, who was wooing them closer to the road for the visitors' enjoyment.

"Sherry is a good employee," Riggs said, complimenting the young woman's ability. "I'd like to clone her."

She explained the coloring of a llama is absolutely unpredictable and always a surprise. Browns, blacks, whites, and mixed make interesting combinations.

Meanwhile, a young llama stuck its nose into the coffee can of feed in Lynch's hand. As she moved he followed, still nibbling the snack.

Further away, at a big tub of water meant for drinking, another llama put in its forefeet and otherwise remained quite motionless for a long while.

"Llamas are very particular about their water," Lynch told the group. "They like to drink spring water the best."

One ErReR Hill bull took top state honors and two are AI studs.

They have show cattle and a commercial herd under the management of Steve Schmuck.

Riggs owns several ag-related businesses in town and his enterprises that employ a work force of 500 people are a bonus for the economy of Somerset County. His hospitality and generosity affect both farming and tourism trades, especially when tours such as the PAAE make an appointment to visit. The place manages to combine simplicity with nature's splendor.

Bob Hay is another right hand man that Riggs relies on for the management of Lincoln Supply and Equipment.

The educators also toured the Snyder of Berlin snack food factory, Mountain View Dairy Farm, and Cold Ridge Farms' intensive grazing and nutrient management project.

Other PAAE tours included the Pittsburgh Zoo to observe animal science and landscaping, Seven Springs Mountain Resort's complete operation, and the Oglevie Nurseries.

"I Heard That" Wasn't it you that said you want a beautiful farm that is self supporting and even pays you quite handsomely besides for your labor to operate it??? - That is tough to find in today's market

Let s see - you wanted a large brick farm house (updated) and maybe a large modern addition w/a garage attached Here we even add an oversized 3 car detached garage that looks like it was designed for entertaining guests – it even has it s own kitchen There is a large grassy area with a large farm pond - oh my!! What else?

Well how about three large turkey barns which are presently in operation and with all the good modern equipment in them But, you see the owners are ready to retire and would like someone like you to take over Sound too good to be true? Ck it out

Oh yes, there is also another dwelling if you would prefer to put in another operator/ hired hand This truly is a dream property with the driveways nicely paved and buildings in real good shape This is all on about 34 acres which is nicely secluded but near to every kind of service you might desire

CONSOLIDATED NUTRITION, L.L.C.

Hey They're Only Heifers!

- They're only the end result of your breeding program
- In most herds they will only comprise 40% of the milking herd during their first lactation
- They're only a big part of herd's future
- And if you don't have them fresh between 22 and 24 months of age, they will cost you $2 to $3 per day through lost production and increased housing and labor expenses.

So If They're All of These Things...

Why not feed them one of the most technically advanced feeding programs available today?

CONSOLIDATED NUTRITION'S NEW Ultra BALANCE™ REPLACEMENT HEIFER SYSTEM

A flexible program designed to provide optimal replacement heifer nutrition. This exciting new program includes:

CN proprietary sugar blend:

- Stimulates rumen development
- Stimulates appetite
- Increases Average Daily Gain
- Improved Feed Efficiency

Yeast Culture

- Stimulates dry matter intake
- Promote early rumen development
- All Plant Proteins

For those producers desiring greater growth rates, ask your Consolidated Nutrition representative about the Accelerated Growth Rate Program.
